After attending Friday prayers, he was on his way home when BGB and police opened fire on protesters. Fearing for his life, he ran and took refuge on the fourth floor of the underconstruction building.

According to Amir, two police officers suddenly entered the building and chased him. He retreated and hung onto the cornice of the fourth floor. When cops found Amir, they pointed their firearms at him, and yelled, "Jhap de, jhap de (Jump, jump)."

To intimidate him, one of the officers fired several blank shots while pointing their gun at him.

"But I knew that if I jumped, I would not survive the fall," Amir added.

Suddenly, another cop from the third floor shot at him six times, aiming at both of his legs.

He fell to the third floor, collapsed and began bleeding profusely. Then the officers left, completely disregarding whether Amir was alive.

"I tried to get up, but had no strength. I shouted, but sounds of gunfire muffled my pleas for help," Amir recounted.

"At one point, I almost gave up hope. I thought I would die. My vision was blurred, but a part of me didn't want to give up. I kept thinking, 'I can't die like this'. Thoughts of my elderly father and my sister, whose marriage I had been saving money for, kept me going. This wasn't how I would die," he added.

Criticising India, Fakhrul "The enemies of Bangladesh had to flee the country, and I don't think providing them shelter will earn India any goodwill from the country's people."

Earlier in the morning, after placing wreaths at the shrine of party founder Ziaur Rahman, Fakhrul said members of BNP and its affiliated organisations have no involvement in the recent "disturbances".

"Certain individuals are stayed quiet. Journalists conspiring to undermine the students' victory. They are creating disturbances and unfairly targeting our party members," he added. Meanwhile,

Spanier, acting ambassador of the EU to Bangladesh, met Fakhrul yesterday and discussed various issues related to Bangladesh's economic development and democratic transition.

Speaking to reporters after the meeting, BNP standing committee member Amir Khasru Mahmud Chowdhury said the EU has expressed willingness to assist in the recovery of money laundered abroad.

"Over US $100 billion has been laundered out of the country. Discussions have been held about bringing the money back, and they [the EU] are ready to cooperate in this matter," said Khasru.

During the long meeting at the BNP chairperson's office in Gulshan, he said talks were held about Bangladesh's future, focusing democratic, political, and overall development.
