village in Netrakona's Kalmakanda upazila, Mamun worked in a sweater factory in Narayanganj, where he lived with his family.

Mamun joined a victory rally on August 5 afternoon in Jatrabari. What started as a peaceful gathering soon turned violent as clashes erupted between protesters and police. Suddenly, Mamun was struck by three bullets in his back. He was rushed to Sir Salimullah Medical College Hospital, where he died the next day.

Mamun's body was taken back to his village and buried in the family graveyard. He left behind three children, including his eldest daughter, Sadia Akter, who is 10 years old and suffers from a mental illness, and his two sons
