Displaced Palestinians make their way as they flee areas in the northern Gaza Strip following an Israeli evacuation order in Jabalia yesterday. Israel's relentless offensive on Gaza has so far killed at least 41,870 people, according to the health ministry in the Hamas-run Palestinian territory.

Palestinians wonder how to deal with tonnes of rubble

In the ruins of his two-storey home, 11-year-old Mohammed gathers chunks of the fallen roof into a broken pail and pounds them into gravel which his father will use to make gravestones for victims of the Gaza offensive.

"We get the rubble not to build houses, no, but for tombstones and graves from one misery to another," his father, former construction worker Jihad Shamali, 42, says as he cuts through metal salvaged from their home in the southern city of Khan Younis, damaged during an Israeli raid in April.

The work is hard, and at times grim. In March, the family built a tomb for one of Shamali's sons, Ismail, killed while running household errands.

But it is also a tiny part of the efforts starting to take shape to deal with the rubble left by Israel's military campaign to eliminate Palestinian group Hamas.

The United Nations estimates there is over 42 million tonnes of debris, including both shattered edifices that are still standing and flattened buildings.

UN estimate shows debris clearance might cost $1.2 billion

That is 14 times the amount of rubble accumulated in Gaza between 2008 and the offensive's start a year ago, and over five times the amount left by the 2016-17 Battle of Mosul in Iraq, the UN said.

Piled up, it would fill the Great Pyramid of Giza - Egypt's largest - 11 times. And it is growing daily.

The UN is trying to help as Gaza authorities consider how to deal with the rubble, three UN officials said.

A UN-led Debris Management Working Group plans a pilot project with Palestinian authorities in Khan Younis and the central Gaza city of Deir El-Balah to start clearing roadside debris this month.

"The challenges are huge," said Alessandro Mrakic, the Gaza Office head for the United Nations' Development Programme (UNDP) which is co-chairing the working group. "It's going to be a massive operation, but at the same time, it's important that we start now."

Israel's military has said Hamas fighters hide among civilians and that it will strike them wherever they emerge, while also trying to avoid harming civilians.

received are not enough to feed them for long," Rabbot said. It takes around $100 daily to arrange food for the Bangladeshis at the shelter.

According to Babu Saha, another Bangladeshi based in Beirut, the Bangladeshi community in Lebanon has set up many such shelters in comparatively safe places.

He is aware of injuries of at least seven Bangladeshis so far by Israeli strikes. No deaths among the Bangladeshis have been reported yet.

Abdul Karim, president of Lebanon Probashi Bangladeshi Sramik Union in Beirut, said many Bangladeshis want to return home, but many others do not because they think that the war will end. They also spent good amounts of money to migrate to Lebanon.

Miraz is among those who want to return home because they are worried about the war. He urged the Bangladesh government to take immediate steps to repatriate them.

A foreign ministry official said the government is reviewing the options to repatriate them. "We are also discussing the matter with the International Organization for Migration. Fund has also been allocated to feed those living in the shelters," the official told this correspondent.

Lebanon hosts about 1,00,000 Bangladeshi workers, including the undocumented ones, according to an estimate of the Bangladesh embassy in Beirut.

The Israeli army ordered civilians in 26 border towns in southern Lebanon yesterday to evacuate immediately amid air and ground attacks against what Israel calls Hezbollah targets across Lebanon, the Anadolu Agency of Turkey reported.

At least 1,204 people have been killed and 3,411 injured in the attacks since September 23. Tel Aviv also started a ground invasion of southern Lebanon on October 1.

The military campaign was an escalation in a yearlong conflict between Israel and Hezbollah since the start of Tel Aviv's brutal offensive on the Gaza Strip that has killed nearly 41,900 people, mostly women and children, since a Hamas attack last year.

India villagers kill last wolf from man-eating pack

AFP, Lucknow

Villagers in India have beaten to death a wolf believed to be the last of a six-member pack that killed nine people, eight of them children, wildlife officials said yesterday.

The grey wolves sparked hysteria among residents in Bahraich district of Uttar Pradesh, where the animals were said to have attacked more than 40 people.

More than 150 armed personnel and dozens of forestry officials were deployed to capture the wolves last month. Five of the animals were trapped, with drones and surveillance cameras suggesting only one remained free.

Iran prepares plan to respond to any Israeli attack

AFP, Tehran

Iran has prepared a plan to respond to a possible Israeli attack following the Islamic republic's retaliatory missile strike against it last week, local media reported yesterday.

"The plan for the necessary response to a possible action by the Zionists (Israel) has been fully prepared," Tasnim news agency said, quoting "an informed source" in the armed forces.

Oil Minister Mohsen Paknejad visited a key oil site in the Gulf, amid growing concerns over possible Israeli strikes.

On Tuesday, the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) fired some 200 missiles at Israel in retaliation after the leaders of groups allied to Tehran were killed in attacks.

"If Israel takes action, there will be no doubt that an Iranian counterattack will be carried out," said Tasnim. It added that Iran "has a list of many Israeli targets", and said Iran's attack on Tuesday "showed that we can level to the ground any place it desires".

Tuesday's missile barrage, Iran's second-ever direct attack on Israel, came after an Israeli air raid killed Hezbollah chief Hassan Nasrallah and IRGC top general Abbas Nilforoushan in Beirut.

It was also in retaliation for the killing of Palestinian group Hamas leader Ismail Haniyeh on July 31 in Tehran in an attack widely blamed on Israel.

On Saturday, Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi warned of a "proportional and similar reaction from Iran, and even stronger" if Israel attacks.

US President Joe Biden on Friday advised Israel against targeting oil sites in Iran, one of the world's 10 largest oil producers.

India's BJP set to lose two state elections: exit polls

REUTERS, New Delhi

India's ruling party is projected to have lost two key provincial elections to the main opposition Congress party and its allies, exit polls showed, suggesting another setback after the party fared poorly in national elections.

Local media reported that Congress had a clear advantage in exit polls in the northern state of Haryana, indicating an end to a decade of rule by Prime Minister Narendra Modi's Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) in the state. The opposition also held an edge in the Himalayan territory of Jammu and Kashmir (J&K).

The two elections were held in phases that ended on Saturday. Votes will be counted tomorrow and results will be announced the same day. The exit poll results were released late on Saturday.

Exit polls, conducted by private polling firms including TV broadcasters, have a patchy record in India, which analysts say poses a particular challenge due to its large and diverse voting population.

The exit polls had projected Modi's BJP would win a large majority in the general election in June, but it fell short and had to depend on regional parties to secure a majority and form a coalition government. The two Indian territories are the first to go to the polls since the national elections.

India's industrial hub of Maharashtra and the mineral-rich eastern state of Jharkhand, next up in provincial elections, are awaiting the announcement of polls dates that are expected to be in November.

The Jammu and Kashmir election was the first in a decade in the Himalayan region, which has endured years of militant violence.
