Alam was speaking at a roundtable titled "Cyber Security Law: Balancing Security and Freedom of Expression," organised by the Telecom and Technology Reporters Network Bangladesh (TRNB) and Anwar Technologies at the BRAC Centre Inn, Mohakhali, Dhaka.

Syed Almas Kabir, former president of BASIS, emphasised the need for a clear definition of free speech within the law, along with public awareness campaigns to educate citizens about their rights and responsibilities.

"There should also be a practice of self-censorship in the news media to curb sensationalism and clickbait journalism," he added.

Kabir called for a fresh approach in drafting the CSA, considering the emergence of new cybercrimes in the digital age. He advocated for a complete rewrite of the law with progressive language, abolishing the current version.

ICT Secretary Shish Haider Chowdhury stressed the importance of transparency in cybersecurity-related legal frameworks.

"The law should not be repressive. We must ensure it protects both security and the right to free expression."

He said concerns would be addressed when the government drafts a new law or amends the current one.

Chowdhury also acknowledged the need to strengthen the National Cyber Security Authority, which currently operates with limited staff.

BTRC Chairman MajGen (ret) Emdad Ul Bari echoed concerns about balancing data protection and free speech, highlighting the complexities of individual rights versus institutional responsibilities.

While acknowledging the necessity of the act to combat rising cyber threats like hacking, identity theft, and online fraud, participants raised concerns about its potential misuse to stifle dissent and curtail civil liberties. Specific provisions allowing for content blocking and arrest without warrant were cited as problematic, with fears that these clauses could be exploited to target journalists and government critics under vague charges such as "spreading misinformation" or "hurting religious sentiments".

Anwar Technologies co-founder Waez R Hossain warned of increasing risks posed by artificial intelligence, urging the government to ensure intellectual property protection to foster innovation in the software and startup sectors.

The roundtable was chaired by TRNB President Samir Kumar Dey. The keynote paper was presented by former TRNB President and Views Bangladesh Editor Rashed Mehedi, while TRNB General Secretary Masduzzaman Robin delivered the welcome speech.

"Lead exposure can severely impact the nervous systems of newborns and children, while mercury can damage the brain and adversely impact cognitive functions. The health risks are exacerbated for those handling e-waste without proper protective gear," he added.

Contacted, Md Anisur Rahman, chief waste management officer of KCC, said a project on integrated waste management is underway. "The Tk 52.70 crore project titled 'Integrated Landfill and Resource Recovery Facility-Shalua' is part of the Second City Region Development Project of Local Government Engineering Department and financed by the Asian Development Bank," he said.

"Once implemented, this facility will improve the segregation and management of all types of waste, including e-waste, and incorporate a more systematic approach to waste treatment," he added.

were likely abducted by the Arakan Army while they were fishing in the Naf river. "We are trying to bring them back," he added.

Local ward member Abdus Salam echoed the same. According to locals, three boats, including one owned by Abdul Majid from Shahparir Dwip, went fishing in the river when the Arakan Army members, armed with weapons, chased them.

Two boats managed to escape, but Majid's one was captured and taken to the Myanmar side, they said.

soon test the station's preparedness and inform the Ministry of Road Transport and Bridges adviser about the outcome before making a final decision about resuming the station.

Unidentified individuals went on a rampage at Mirpur-10 and Kazipara metro stations on July 19, amid the student movement for quota reform. Metro rail operations remained suspended for over a month afterward.

The then Road Transport and Bridges Minister Obaidul Quader had said that reopening the metro stations would not be possible even in one year. Although metro rail operations resumed on August 25, the two stations remained closed. The authority reopened Kazipara station on September 20.

A DMTCL official said they have brought some equipment from Bijoy Sarani and Uttara South stations to replace the damaged equipment.

Some of the equipment was also brought from the training institute of DMTCL, he said.

Two DMTCL officials said the road transport and bridges adviser directed them to reopen the stations as soon as possible.

All the equipment that was damaged was imported from abroad, and replacing them with new units from abroad once again would be a long and time-consuming process.

system itself remains unchanged," he added.

Indigenous researcher Pavel Partha, the event's lead speaker, highlighted Larma's pluralistic constitutional philosophy, which seeks to represent all classes, castes, and communities.

"Larma fought against imposing the 'Bangalee' identity as the sole national identity during the drafting of the 1972 Constitution, as it denied the distinct identities of indigenous groups and other minorities," Partha said.

He said Larma's ideas resonate with today's demand for an inclusive Bangladesh.

"Hindus, Muslims, Buddhists, Christians, and Indigenous communities—together we are Bangladesh. This reflects Larma's philosophy of equality," he said.

Former Dhaka University professor Amena Mohsin emphasised the importance of defining the identity of indigenous people, critiquing the Bangalee dominance imposed on the Chittagong Hill Tracts. She called for reforms to the 1900 Chittagong Hill Tracts Regulation, which undermines indigenous rights, and urged addressing the conflicting aspects of the CHT Peace Accord.

Samanta Sharmin, spokesperson for Jatiya Nagorik Committee, said true citizens' dignity in the new constitution requires inclusion of all classes, saying, "Cooperation and peace will be the foundation for building a future Bangladesh."

Sundarbans tiger

MA Aziz, professor of Zoology at Jahangirnagar University, said, "The Sundarbans provides a favourable environment for tiger breeding, and it is likely that the tiger population will continue to grow in the future."

Over a period of 318 days, 1,210 cameras were deployed across 605 grids in key regions of the Sundarbans, including Satkhira, Khulna, Chandpai, and Sharankhola ranges. This year's survey captured 7,297 tiger photos, the highest number ever recorded.

In an effort to further protect this critically endangered species, the government has designated over half of the Sundarbans (53.52 percent) as a protected area, prohibiting resource extraction.

To reduce human-tiger conflicts, a 60-kilometre nylon fence is being erected near human settlements, and 12 raised earthen shelters have been built within the forest to safeguard wildlife during storms.
