Bangladesh may not regain US GSP soon

Finance adviser says

STAR BUSINESS REPORT

Bangladesh is unlikely to regain benefits offered under the generalised system of preferences (GSP) from the United States if the programme is revived in the near future because of several issues related to labour rights in the country, Finance Adviser Salehuddin Ahmed said yesterday

Ahmed, who is currently in the US to take part in the annual meetings between the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, said he raised the topic during a meeting with the US Department of the Treasury on the sidelines of the event.

"If the GSP benefits are reinstated, we may not be able to avail them. They have some labour-related concerns. The US Congress is also involved in decisions regarding GSP facilities," the finance adviser said while speaking to journalists after the meeting.

However, he did elaborate on the US Congress' involvement in the process.

Introduced in 1976, the GSP was a trade scheme that allowed least developed and developing countries to export goods to the US at a low duty or none at all in some cases.

If the GSP benefits are reinstated, we may not be able to avail them. They have some labour-related concerns.

Salehuddin Ahmed

However, such benefits were suspended for Bangladesh in June 2013 over serious shortcomings in labour rights and workplace safety standards after twin industrial disasters: the Tazreen Fashions fire and Rana Plaza building collapse.

The scheme was then cancelled for all beneficiary countries in December 2020.

Bangladesh has tried several times to regain duty-free access to the US market to boost exports.

The country has fulfilled 16 conditions for reinstatement of GSP benefits and submitted progress reports to the United States Trade Representative twice.

However, the US has repeatedly said that Bangladesh needs to do more.

Ahmed also shared that the World Bank would provide $250 million in grants to repair the damage caused by recent floods in Bangladesh.

He shared the information after meetings with members of different multinational development partners, including World Bank officials.

RMG units struggle to adopt global reporting standards

Keynote paper blames a lack of data, expertise

STAR BUSINESS REPORT

Local garment factories are struggling to implement the Global Reporting Initiatives (GRI) standards, a set of 246 globally accepted standard issues, owing to a raft of factors, including a lack of data, local expertise, national policy directives and incentives, according to a keynote paper presented yesterday.

The GRI standards represent global best practices for reporting publicly on a range of environmental, social and governance (ESG) impacts.

But so far, only 33 local garment factories have implemented GRI standards for reporting.

The paper also said that 66 percent of global consumers, including 73 percent of millennials, are willing to pay more for sustainable goods.

By 2026, ESG-related assets under management (AuM) are expected to increase to $33.9 trillion, which would account for over one-fifth of total global AuM.

Even more importantly, the EU Sustainability Reporting Standard (ESRS) will be enforced by 2026, said Mohammad Monowar Hossain, head of sustainability at Team Group, while presenting the paper at a roundtable on "Implementing GRI in the RMG Sector of Bangladesh."

The discussion was jointly organised by The Daily Star and Swisscontact at The Daily Star Centre in Dhaka yesterday. Tanjim Ferdous, in-charge (NGOs and foreign missions) of The Daily Star, moderated the roundtable, which featured experts, exporters, professionals, entrepreneurs and officials of different diplomatic Asif Ashraf, managing director of Urmi Garments Ltd, said the Bangladesh Garment Manufacturers and Exporters Association (BGMEA) was the first trade body in the country that had helped its members implement GRI standards in their factories.

However, many small and medium enterprises do not have the financial capabilities or human resources to implement the standards, he said.

"International retailers and brands are not ready to pay higher prices, but every such initiative costs money."

Melita Mehjabeen, a professor at the Institute of Business Administration of the University of Dhaka, said GRI standards also need to be implemented in sectors such as steel.

She added that a number of companies did not have an adequate understanding of GRI standards.

Md Akhter Hossain Apurbo, vice-president of the Bangladesh Knitwear Manufacturers and Exporters Association (BKMEA), said local exporters are eager to learn how to increase trade while adhering to rules and regulations.

However, Apurbo added that Bangladesh's graduation

Meeting $100b garment export target by 2030 tough, but feasible

"Buyers are returning to Bangladesh.

Manufacturers and Exporters Association

REFAYET ULLAH MIRDHA

Bangladesh's ambitious $100 billion garment export target by 2030 is currently facing a number of challenges both at home and abroad, but local manufacturers and business leaders are still optimistic about achieving the goal.

To meet the target, readymade garment exporters seek government policy support, a stable political environment and overall security for their production units.

In fiscal year 2023-24, Bangladesh, the second largest apparel exporter of the world, shipped readymade garments worth over $36 domestic challenges facing manufacturers include a poor business and investment climate, disruptions to production and shipments and shortages of gas and power for production lines.

These issues are compounded by global inflationary pressures and declining prices for apparel items in key markets.

Moreover, the country's scheduled graduation from the least developed country club in 2026 will strip away preferential market access facilities for Bangladeshi RMG items, estimated at $7.77 billion by the World Trade Organization (WTO).

During his tenure at the BGMEA, Hassan set the export target in 2022. To achieve this goal, the BGMEA then identified adequate gas and power supply, new investment, product and market diversification and investment in man-made fibre products as crucial factors.

Traders reluctant

On October 23, the government of India eased export restrictions on non-basmati white rice by removing the minimum tonne. The move came a day after India lifted its 10 percent export tax on parboiled rice.

However, while these measures may help ease international prices for the grain, local importers remain sceptical about the viability of imports considering prices.

Md Habibur Rahman Hosaini, an additional secretary of the food ministry's procurement and supply wing, said some importers have made inquiries, but no official applications for rice imports have been filed.

He also opined that traders may hold off on imports for the moment.

This year's supply disruption follows record rice yields in fiscal year 2023-24, when the country produced more than 4 crore tonnes of rice, doing away with the need for imports up until as recently as October 23, according to sources within the food ministry. WHAT

EXPORTERS SAY Rice exporters and millers in India welcomed export price of $490 per the recent moves to ease export restrictions, claiming they would help stabilise both domestic and international prices ahead of upcoming festive seasons such as Diwali, Christmas and New Year.

BV Krishna Rao, president of the Rice Exporters Association, told The Daily Star that the international demand for rice remains strong and they are optimistic about reclaiming the orders lost due to previous restrictions.

Dev Garg, vice president of the Indian Rice Exporters Federation, said: "The floor price had prevented Indian farmers and exporters from selling some relatively cheaper grades on the global market."

The Indian government's decision would boost rice exports, with shipments expected to top 22 million tonnes by March next year, according to Rajesh Paharia Jain, an exporter based in New Delhi.

Hit by 22-day ban, hilsa fishers seek increased govt assistance

fishermen have sought increased assistance amid the bans on hilsa fishing, claiming that the rice provided to them as support under the government's vulnerable group feeding (VGF) scheme is insufficient to sustain them during the restriction period.

For over a decade, the government has been imposing ban on hilsa fishing in three different periods and this time a 22-day ban is ongoing since October and debts to pay. How can I feed my 13 this year as part of efforts to ensure breeding of mother hilsa fishes.

The two other periods are – one for 65 days for the preservation of hilsa fries or jatka from May 20 to July 23 and another for 60 days for hilsa sanctuaries imposed in March-April.

This year, each fisherman registered with the District Fisheries Department will get 25 kilogrammes (kgs) of rice under the VGF scheme, as until November 3 none will be allowed to for bans begin, as he is yet to get any rice fishermen and 64,770 of them are listed hilsa fishing, the only source of earning under the VGF scheme this time.

But Islam Howladar, a fisherman of Kuakata area of Patuakhali's Kalapara upazila, said 25 kgs of rice is not enough to feed his family for 22 days.

The 38-year-old said he has been hunting hilsa in the sea for the last 20 years and he does not have any skill or job other than fishing.

"I have two kids who are studying whole family with only 25 kgs of rice and bear the educational expenses during the ban when I will earn Howladar said he needs at least 50 kgs of rice and an additional Tk 5,000 as soon as possible, as he has already taken high-cost loans to pay the bills. The fisherman also demanded for Salah Uddin, another 40-year-old fisherman from Mohipur area, said he has close to 30 years of experience of fishing hilsa in the deep sea.

He said the 22-day ban is taking a toll on him, as he did not get the desired amount of fishes in the sea this year.

"The 25-kg rice the government gave will last a maximum of nine days in my family. What would I have after that? How can I buy the additional food items to have them with rice?"

Salah Uddin also stressed the need for allocating at least 40 kgs of rice and an additional Tk 5,000 for each Dulal Howladar, who has been making a living by hunting hilsa in the Payra river for 20 years, said he received 25-kg VGF rice today, but he needs more to pass the ban period.

Traders reluctant to import rice despite tariff cuts

SUKANTA HALDER and PALLAB BHATTACHARYA

Rice traders in Bangladesh are less interested in importing the grain despite the recent slash in related tariffs as they do not believe there is enough of a profit margin because of high prices on the international market.

They added that doing so would have little effect on reducing domestic prices at this time.

The retail price of rice has been rising ever since severe flooding across the country's Northeastern region in August impacted the cultivation of Aman season paddy.

So, to prevent further hikes in prices due to reduced yields of Bangladesh's second-largest rice crop, the interim government tried to encourage imports and boost local stocks by lowering the import tariff.

In a circular on October 20, the National Board of Revenue (NBR) reduced the import tariff on rice to 25 percent from 62.5 percent.

The NBR said the reduction came in response to the widespread flooding, which raised concerns over a potential supply shortage in coming months.

The revenue authority also informed that the tariff reduction would lower the import cost by Tk 14.40 per kilogramme

However, millers said that importing rice from India is not financially viable even with the reduced tariff as market prices are similarly high in the neighbouring nation.

Moreover, associated costs like transportation mean that prices of imported rice would reach far higher than

On condition of anonymity, a major rice importer said it is very unlikely that anyone would consider buying the grain from abroad considering current market

For example, even if the import duty was reduced to zero, the price of imported fine rice would reach Tk 80 per kg and coarse rice Tk 76 per kg after factoring in all related costs.

In contrast, locally grown fine rice is currently being sold domestically for around Tk 65 per kg and coarse rice for Tk 55 per kg.

The importer also said rice prices will likely decrease after the Aman and Boro rice harvests hit the shelves, further diminishing the need for imports.

Nazir Hossain Prodhan, another major rice importer, echoed those sentiments.

"At this price point, no one will import rice. As a result, prices in local markets will remain elevated in the near term." An importer based at the Hili land port in Dinajpur, preferring to remain BR-29 varieties have seen significant price unnamed, said some people may consider importing rice after about a month.

This is because rice prices in India are expected to drop after it removed stringent conditions on rice exports as the upcoming harvest will likely be sufficient for domestic consumption.

The reduced supply of rice has been a driving factor in the rising prices of the grain in kitchen markets across Dhaka.

Traders said that the cost of rice has increased by Tk 50 to Tk 150 per 50 kgs in some areas over the past week.

For example, the popular BR-28 and hikes, with 50-kg sacks now selling for Tk 3,000 to Tk 3,100 compared to Tk 2,850 to Tk 2,950 just a week earlier.

PRICE TRENDS OF COARSE RICE

The price of medium-grain rice increased by about 1 percent over the past week and about 2 percent over the past month, according to data of the state-run Trading Corporation of Bangladesh.

On an annual basis, the price of fine rice rose 9.09 percent while that of mediumgrain rice shot up 11.43 percent. Prices of coarse rice increased 7.14 percent.

HR: The new corporate therapist

MAHTAB UDDIN AHMED

Human resources (HR), once the department that handled payroll, kept track of who took more sick days (or less), and planned those awkward teambuilding retreats where you felt you would rather be anywhere else -- is now expected to do a lot more than just decorate artificial plants inside the office. According to the article, "HR's New Role", published in Harvard Business Review, HR has undergone more transformations than the local tea shop that has added bubble tea to its menu. HR is no more about hiring and firing, rather it is more about preventing employees from jumping ship faster than a Dhaka rickshaw-puller in heavy traffic.

The traditional HR recipe was to squeeze and watch the talent leave with indifference. We all remember a time when HR's primary task was cutting costs, as evident in the global giant IT companies, not to mention the MNCs in Bangladesh. The old approach was simple: reduce salaries, slash benefits, and limit training. The idea was to keep expenses low and profits high. And for a long time, this worked.

But that era is long gone. Workers have more options in today's tight skilled labour market. They don't want to stay in jobs where they feel underpaid, overworked, and unappreciated. So now, companies are struggling to keep essential positions filled. Squeezing employees is no longer a brilliant strategy as they exit the door faster than a busload of Dhaka commuters during rush hours. The new priority of HR today is to keep the ship

Workers are stressed, and HR needs to step in like a superhero, preventing burnout and keeping the workforce satisfied and engaged. More empathy and perhaps a few extra tea breaks can do the tricks! To say HR has undergone major alterations in recent decades is an understatement. It has evolved from handling basic tasks like leave applications and payroll to becoming the "Corporate Therapist". It now educates leaders on the cost of staff turnover, alerting against layoffs that can slow down the process of recovery due to lengthy rehiring and retaining. HR also manages employee anxiety regarding automation and ensures transparency to prevent panic.

Moreover, training and development, once overlooked in Bangladesh, are now essential as businesses demand new skills. HR must advocate for skill development and foster Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI). After all, a homogenous team is less likely to innovate or excel in today's diverse marke Gone are the days when HR's role was limited to being the "attendance police" or planning the awkward team-building exercises. Now, HR is the company's behind-the-scenes strategist, quietly pulling the strings to retain talent, prevent burnout, and give reality checks to leaders on recruitment costs. From lobbying for more training to calming everyone's Al-related fears, HR has become the unsung hero in today's cutthroat job market.

The new HR mantra is to keep employees motivated and, thereby, productive. In Bangladesh, HR is taking its time to step up to these new responsibilities compared to its global counterparts. But better late than never. With this dramatic shift, HR is no longer just a department but the engine driving business success. Top of form.

China should use fiscal policy to boost growth: IMF

AFP, Washington

The Chinese government should use its tax-and-spend policies to help boost flagging economic growth, a senior IMF official told AFP ahead of key meetings this week in Washington.

The IMF has raised concern about the levels of global public debt, which it estimates will reach a record $100 trillion this year, with debt expected to rise in both the United States and China, the world's two largest economies.

"China is in the process of a major transition," Vitor Gaspar, head of the IMF's department that advises governments on fiscal affairs, said in an interview from his IMF headquarters office close to the White House.

"Fiscal capacity can help China reach a different plateau in terms of its economic ambition, in terms of its economic prosperity," he said ahead of the Monday opening of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank annual meetings.

Gaspar noted China's "very strong fiscal capacity to act."

The IMF estimates that China's economic growth will ease over the coming years, slowing from 5.2 percent in 2023 to 4.8 percent this year, and 4.5

States, which have rising levels of public debt while also being "safely away from debt distress," should move gradually but decisively to adjust fiscal policy to bring economic slowdown. Countries like China and the United down their debt-to-GDP ratios, Gaspar said. At the same time, China should also be looking to implement fiscal policies to help drive growth and reverse its expected

An employee works at a factory that produces charging stations for electric cars in Ruichang, in central China's Jiangxi province.

"For a continental economy like China, the main driver of growth and development has to be domestic," he said, noting that if this issue was tackled it could help to rebalance the Chinese economy.

China should also be looking to tackle "financial misallocations" stemming primarily from the country's struggling real estate sector, and also to tackle some of the "vulnerabilities and financial weaknesses" at the sub-national level, he said.

Alongside China, the IMF sees the United States as a key driver of global public debt, and expects its gross general government debt-to-GDP ratio to hit 121 percent this year, and to approach 132 percent by the end of the decade, Gaspar said.

This figure does not include the trillion-dollar spending commitments made by both Democratic candidate Kamala Harris and Republican Donald Trump on the campaign trail ahead of the US presidential elections on November 5, Gaspar said.

Like China, "the US benefits from ample room to adjust fiscal policy instruments to bring US debt under control," he said, adding that the tax and spending choices would ultimately have to be made by politicians.
