Elephant found dead in Sherpur

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Jamalpur

A wild elephant was found dead in Batkuchi Tilapara area of Madhutila Eco Park near Nalitabari border in Sherpur

The Forest Department and locals suspected that the elephant died after being electrocuted when it came down from the hills to look for food at night.

On Thursday, a group of elephants descended from the hills while the farmers set up a generator's electrical connection wire in the field to deter the elephants.

Later, they came to know that the elephant died around 10:00pm and informed the forest department, said Rafiqul Islam, Madhutila range officer. He said they are looking into the incident.

HAMKURA IN KHULNA

A river once flowed here

DIPANKAR ROY, Khulna

that flowed through Dumuria upazila in Khulna now lives only in the memories of locals. Over the past two decades, this 12-kilometre waterway has gradually faded, its vibrant flow choked by infrastructure projects, sluice gates, and bridges that eventually led to its demise.

Originating from the Shree River in Jashore's Bhavadah area, Hamkura once served as a vital drainage route for the region. It carried water from the sprawling Beel Dakatiya wetland and over a dozen swamps and canals, eventually joining larger rivers like

For years, this river was a lifeline for the community, supporting The once-mighty Hamkura River local transportation, fishing, and agriculture.

Back in the day, ferries plied across Hamkura's 200-metre width, connecting people and trade routes like the Khulna-Satkhira regional highway. Fishermen caught fish, the Bhadra, Gangrail, and Sholmari. including hilsa, and farmers along the banks relied on its waters to irrigate their crops.

The river's transformation began in the 1960s, when several sluice gates were installed along the Dumuria-Sahapur road in Amvita, limiting the river's flow.

In the 1980s, a bridge at Baniyakhali replaced the old ferry service, further changing the river's role. In 1990, the Bangladesh Water Development Board (BWDB) attempted to address waterlogging in Beel Dakatiya by excavating a canal to connect the swamp to the Hamkura, which temporarily improved the river's water flow.

However, in 1995, as part of Khulna-Jashore Drainage the Rehabilitation Project, BWDB SEE PAGE 4 COL 4
