ENFORCED DISAPPEARANCE Order came from AL govt high-ups

Commission says, warns against “community shielding” for individual responsibilities

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The order to carry out enforced disappearances during the ousted Awami League government tenure came from the very top, and the perpetrators will be brought to justice, even in their absence if necessary, the Commission of Enquiry on Enforced Disappearances said yesterday.

“We found that the highest level of the government was involved in committing this crime,” commission Chairperson Justice Moyeenul Islam Chowdhury told reporters at the commission office in Dhaka.

Replying to a query, he said Sheikh Hasina’s adviser Tarique Ahmed Siddique was involved in ordering enforced disappearance and they have evidence to that end.

The commission has interviewed 45 members of law enforcement and intelligence agencies, and identified a good number of law enforcers and intelligence officers involved in carrying out enforced disappearances, he said, without disclosing any names.

“Some people are apprehensive because we are finding involvement of some individuals in enforced disappearances, and the entire force is becoming panic-stricken. We want to tell them that the individuals belonging to law enforcement units or intelligence agencies who were

“Certain agencies have gotten panic-stricken because of our investigation. We want to tell them not to be afraid. If someone from a law enforcement agency or an intelligence agency was involved with enforced disappearance, it was entirely their own personal liability. No agency should own them, or their crimes.”

involved have to take personal criminal responsibility for their crimes,” he said.

He also warned against “community shielding” of perpetrators, saying that criminals sometimes hide behind the collective identity of their community, social group or religion.

“This is called identity-based defence or community shielding. But a person is not tried based on their collective identity, but rather based on specific evidence. Criminal liability is an individual responsibility. There is no scope to accuse an entire community for the crime.”

During Sheikh Hasina’s 15-year rule, hundreds of opposition leaders, rights activists, journalists, and other professionals critical of the government simply disappeared. Although some returned home or were later sent to jail in trumped up charges after brutal torture, many never made it back home.

Talking about the victims of enforced disappearance who are still missing, Justice Moyeenul said the likelihood of their still being alive is minimal.

Currently, there are 330 cases of enforced disappearances involving individuals who have not returned, and the commission is looking for them, he said.

The commission is now inspecting records from India to determine if any of them are in Indian prisons or elsewhere, the commission chief said.

Constituent assembly, nat’l polls can be held together

Says NCP chief Nahid Islam

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Nahid Islam, convenor of the National Citizen Party (NCP), at the party’s first public programme since its launch, yesterday proposed holding constituent assembly elections and the parliamentary polls simultaneously.

“Constituent assembly elections will help pave the way for a new constitution and a genuine democratic process. The constituent assembly polls and the national parliamentary election can be held together. This will enable the formation of a new framework and the creation of a new Bangladesh.”

He made these remarks after visiting the graves of the July uprising martyrs in the capital’s Rayerbazar. He was accompanied by other NCP leaders.

Nahid also demanded swift justice for the repression during the uprising.

“Through fair justice, we can at least alleviate some of the sufferings of those [the families of those] who sacrificed their lives and those who were injured.

Mob violence persists amid weak policing

MOHAMMAD JAMIL KHAN and SHAHEEN MOLLAH

Shahjahan Mintiz was standing in front of his house in Nazrul Nagar area of Char Fasson, Bhola, on Sunday morning when a group of men dragged him away, claiming that he was a thief.

There had been several incidents of theft in the village and the residents were angry. The men broke Mintiz’s arms and legs before gouging out both his eyes.

Mintiz, 40, was accused in six cases. He was arrested in November last year and is now out on bail.

But police later said they have no information that Mintiz was involved in any incident of theft that day.

Ershadul Haque Bhuiyan, officer-in-charge of Dakshin Aicha Police Station, said no one had filed any complaint regarding the mob beating. “If we receive a complaint, we will take action,” he told The Daily Star.

Mob violence has been occurring in the country for years. But the recent spate of mugging and robbery has apparently caused a surge in such incidences.

Rights activists and criminologists point out that political instability and weak governance have created a vacuum, which the wrongdoers are taking advantage of.

Tawohidul Haque, associate professor at Dhaka University’s Institute of Social Welfare and Research, said due to the deterioration of law and order, people are resorting to mob violence.

When people see law enforcement agencies failing to act and criminals taking advantage, they take matters into their own hands, he said.

According to Ain o Salish Kendra, mob beatings claimed at least 128 lives last year, with 96 occurring between August and December. The number of such deaths was 51 in 2023.

Environment Adviser Syeda Rizwana Hasan at an event yesterday said, “The government has clearly stated multiple times that there is no room for mob justice or moral policing in the country. The government has a strong stance against these.”

Environment Adviser Syeda Rizwana Hasan yesterday firmly stated there is no room for mob justice or moral policing in the country.

“The government has consistently taken a strong stance against such actions. However, as law and order have not yet been fully restored to normalcy, incidents of mob justice and moral policing have been observed in some areas,” she said at a press briefing at the Foreign Service Academy.

Referring to a recent incident in Mohammadpur, Rizwana said, “We understand that both parties involved have signed a compromise agreement in the presence of police. Since a settlement has been reached, we must respect it as the final resolution.”

Ukraine can hold out on frontline

Says Kyiv after Trump pauses military aid

REUTERS, Kyiv

Ukraine said yesterday its forces could hold their own on the battlefield as they fight Russian troops after US President Donald Trump paused military aid to Kyiv in the most dramatic step yet in his pivot towards closer ties with Russia.

Trump has upended US policy on Ukraine and Russia, culminating in an explosive confrontation at the White House on Friday, when Trump upbraided President Volodymyr Zelensky for being insufficiently grateful for Washington’s backing.

“President Trump has been clear that he is focused on peace. We need our partners to be committed to that goal as well. We are pausing and reviewing our aid to ensure that it is contributing to a solution,” a US official said on Monday.

Ukraine’s Prime Minister Denys Shmyhal said Kyiv still had the wherewithal to supply its troops. “Our military and the government have the capabilities, the tools, let’s say, to maintain the situation on the front line,” he said.

Shmyhal thanked the US and emphasised that Kyiv wanted mutually-beneficial cooperation. “We will

2 KILLED IN CTG Deceased were Jamaat members Party says its ‘planned murder’

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The two people who were killed in a mob beating “on suspicion of being robbers” in Chattogram’s Satkania upazila’s on Monday night were identified as active members of Bangladesh Jamaat-e-Islami, said police.

Jamaat leaders claimed that the two members of their organisation were murdered in a planned manner by those who want to establish dominance in the area.

The deceased Md Nezam Uddin, 45, of Kanchana union, and Md Salek, 35, of the same union, were identified as supporters of Chattogram Metropolitan Jamaat’s Ameer Shahjahan Chowdhury, said police sources.

“Salek stood accused in two murder cases, and Nezam had also been accused in several cases. After the incident, police and army personnel visited the spot and tried to find out what exactly happened there,” Chattogram Superintendent of Police Saiful Islam Shantu told this newspaper.

“The incident took place during the Taraweeh prayer. After they [victims] went to the upazila’s Chankhola area, an announcement was made through a mosque’s loudspeaker that robbers were spotted in the area, prompting the public to gather,” said the SP.

COX’S BAZAR CLASH Father of victims files murder case

STAFF CORRESPONDENT, Cox’s Bazar

A murder case has been filed seven days after the death of Shihab Kabir Nahid during an attack and clash near an under-construction Air Force base beside the airport in Cox’s Bazar.

His father, Md Nasir Uddin, filed the case with Cox’s Bazar Sadar Model Police Station on Monday night.

The incident occurred on February 24 near Cox’s Bazar town.

The air force on February 27 filed a case against two locals of Samitypara and 300 unidentified individuals. According to the case statement, the air force sustained damages worth Tk 69.4 lakh.

Shihab’s father in the case filed on Monday said he and his wife had gone to the Community Eye Hospital in town for treatment on the morning of February 24. Around noon, a young man named Mohiuddin informed him that his only son, Nahid, 30, had been “shot dead” allegedly by an air force member and that his body was at Cox’s Bazar Sadar Hospital.

Upon hearing this, he rushed to the hospital with his wife. The hospital authorities told him that the body would be handed over after an autopsy. The body was handed over at 6:00pm.

60pc of adults will be obese by 2050 worldwide Say researchers

AFP, Paris

Nearly 60 percent of all adults and a third of all children in the world will be overweight or obese by 2050 unless governments take action, a large new study said yesterday.

The research published in the Lancet medical journal used data from 204 countries to paint a grim picture of what it described as one of the great health challenges of the century.

“The unprecedented global epidemic of overweight and obesity is a profound tragedy and a monumental societal failure,” lead author Emmanuela Gakidou, from the US-based Institute for Health Metrics and Evaluation (IHME), said in a statement.

The number of overweight or obese people worldwide rose from 929 million in 1990 to 2.6 billion in 2021, the study found.

Without a serious change, the researchers estimate that 3.8 billion adults will be overweight or obese in 15 years – or around 60 percent of the global adult population in 2050.

The world’s health systems will come under crippling pressure, the researchers warned, with around a quarter of the world’s obese expected to be aged over 65 by that time.

Calls grow in Germany to bring back military service

AFP, Berlin

Germany’s conservatives who are set to lead the next government argued yesterday that the country should quickly reintroduce compulsory military service.

Friedrich Merz, head of the CDU/CSU bloc that won last month’s elections, has argued that in the era of US President Donald Trump, Europe will have to better handle its own security.

The defence policy spokesman of his centre-right alliance, Florian Hahn, told Bild daily that Germany’s “suspension of conscription no longer fits the current threat situation”.

“The first conscripts will have to walk through the barracks gates in 2025,” Hahn told the daily. “We cannot stand by and watch as the world around us becomes more unsafe.”

Fears about the future strength of NATO have surged in Europe after Trump has increasingly sided with long-isolated Russia against Ukraine, upending the Western consensus of recent years.

Merz has vowed to break with many policies of former CDU chancellor Angela Merkel, including on migration, but also on her 2011 decision to suspend compulsory military service.

“We have received a list of 1,067 Bangladeshis incarcerated in Indian prisons over the last two to two-and-a-half years. We are checking if any of them were victims of enforced disappearance.”

The commission has also received a list of 140 individuals who were pushed into Bangladesh from Indian territory since the fall of the Awami League on August 5, 2024. An initial investigation into the list did not find any victims of enforced disappearance, but further investigation is underway.

However, Justice Moyeenul noted that one individual, Mohammad Rahmatullah who was “picked up by Rab” on August 29, 2023, was allegedly pushed into Bangladesh through the Chapainawabganj border in December.

The commission has so far received 1,752 complaints of enforced disappearances and has investigated 1,000 of them.

It has found secret detention centres run by Directorate General of Forces Intelligence, the police’s Counter Terrorism and Transnational Crime unit and Rab in Dhaka, Bogura, Narayanganj, Rajshahi, Chattogram and several other districts. The commission did not disclose the exact number of the sites.

“We found one centre inside the police lines in Bogura that was specially built over the last decade,” Nur Khan Liton, a member of the commission, told the press conference.

Commission members Justice Md Farid Ahmed Shibli, rights activist Sazzad Hossain and researcher Nabila Idris were also present at the event.

Speaking about the about the update on the arrest warrants for 12 individuals, including six former heads of the DGFI, former police IGP and Rab chief Benazir Ahmed and former DIG and counter terrorism head Md Asaduzzaman, Justice Moyeenul said, “If they cannot be arrested, they will be tried in absentia.”

The arrest warrant was issued on January 6, but the police have not been able to arrest them yet. The Anti-Corruption Commission raided the home of one ex-DGFI chief, Lt Gen Saiful Alam on February 27, but did not find him.

Commission member Nabila Idris said that officers have told the commission that they acted on orders from high-ups in the previous government. However, the current government has a mandate to investigate and ensure justice for the victims of enforced disappearances.

“So, those who are now helping generals escape are not acting on the orders of superiors. This is your individual responsibility, and you are perpetuating the cycle of crime,” she said.

The commission once again pointed out they had ordered the DGFI and Rab to stop the destruction of evidence that had happened post-August 5 at the secret detention centres housed in their respective headquarters, namely Joint Interrogation Cell and Taskforce for Interrogation centre.

Asked if they are taking action against those who had tried to impede the investigation by destroying evidence, the commission said that determining who should bear the responsibility remains a matter of enquiry.

before handing him over to police in the capital’s Mohammadpur. Witnesses said Shanto was caught after he snatched a phone from someone.

In Domshar area of Shariatpur around 10:00pm on Friday, a mob beat six people to death on suspicion that they were robbers.

Police could not identify the deceased as of yesterday, according to Helal Uddin, OC of Palong Police Station.

The deceased men had two shotguns, he said, adding that two cases, one for attempted robbery and another for illegal arms possession, had been filed.

According to a database of the Human Rights Support Society, 17 incidents of mob beatings took place in February, resulting in 10 deaths.

In January this year, 16 people lost their lives at the hands of mobs, ASK data shows.

According to Ain o Salish Kendra, mob beatings claimed at least 128 lives last year, with 96 occurring between August and December. The number of such deaths was 51 in 2023.

The home ministry in a statement yesterday said the government was resolute in ensuring that all individuals involved in mob violence are brought to justice.

Noted rights activist Nur Khan Liton said, “When there is unrest in a society and the rule of law is weak, people take law into their own hands. Recently, we have seen these incidents rise due to instability, slow police response, and the lack of strict measures.”

He added that Home Adviser Jahangir Alam Chowdhury’s comment regarding the assault on two women in Lalmatia reflected an attempt to cover up the government failure.

“The only solution to the problem is to establish the rule of law. Without it, there is no way out,” he said.

The current interim government is not elected, he said, adding that it took office under certain circumstances. “Many wrongdoers are taking advantage of this.”

On March 1, two women were taken into custody after they were physically assaulted by a group of men at a tea stall in the capital’s Lalmatia. The argument began after the men asked them not to smoke.

The next day, Adviser Jahangir said that smoking in public was prohibited for both men and women and urged people not to smoke in public spaces.

On February 25, a young man was killed in Gazipur’s Tongi and two others were seriously injured in Dhaka’s Uttara in mob beatings.

Halizur Rahman, OC of Uttara Pashchim Police Station, said there was no evidence that the two young men in Uttara were involved in any crime committed that day.

“We sent them to jail. They were shown arrested in a case filed earlier,” he said, adding that no cases had been filed regarding the mob violence.

Talebun Rahman, DC (media) of Dhaka Metropolitan Police, said a few isolated incidents of mob violence happened in Dhaka. The DMP urges people to hand over suspects to law enforcers, he said.

Meanwhile, Dhaka District Police in a statement last night urged people not to post about robberies and other “sensitive things” on social media without proper verification.

The statement came after someone posted on social media about a robbery in Dakkhin Keraniganj that turned out to be false, reports BSS.

CR Abrar ‘next education adviser’

Foreign Service Academy in the capital yesterday.

Abrar is a former professor of the University of Dhaka’s international relations department and the president of Odhikar, the human rights organisation founded by Adilur Rahman Khan, the adviser for the ministries of industries and housing and public works.

Abrar is also the executive director of the Refugee and Migratory Movements Research Unit founded by his wife Tasneem Siddiqui, a member of the committee formed by the interim government to prepare a white paper report on the Bangladesh economy.

He will take over from Wahiduddin Mahmud as the education adviser.

“Wahiduddin Mahmud has long expressed that managing two ministries simultaneously has been challenging for him. Given his advanced age and the heavy responsibilities at the planning ministry, CR Abrar is being added to the advisory council,” Shafiqul said.

However, the exact number of new advisers who would be sworn in today remains uncertain.

The expansion follows the passing of adviser Hasan Ariff and the resignation of adviser Nahid Islam, which have left Chief Adviser Prof Muhammad Yunus with additional ministerial responsibilities.

Since he prefers not to handle too many portfolios himself, new appointments are being made to redistribute the workload, The Daily Star has learnt from people involved in the proceedings.

Prof Yunus’s advisory council expanded twice after the interim government took office on August 8 last year. He also reshuffled council responsibilities multiple times.

At present, the advisory council consists of 22 members, including the chief adviser.

Additionally, three special envoys and special assistants hold advisory ranks, while three deputy minister-ranked special assistants assist the advisers of three ministries.

This justice must serve as a precedent to ensure that no fascist regime emerges in the future.”

Sarjis Alam, chief organiser (Northern region) of the NCP, stated that as long as Hasina is not on the gallows, no one should “even mistakenly talk about elections”.

“Where killer Hasina has disposed of the bodies is still unknown. Mothers are desperately looking for their children’s remains. Until justice is served, how can we think about anything else in this country?”

The party’s Chief Organiser (Southern region) Hasnat Abdullah, said the current government came to power through the blood of students and the public.

“They must remember that if justice is not ensured, the entire process [of the interim government’s formation] will be questioned. Justice must be ensured as quickly as possible. If necessary, the number of special tribunals should be increased to expedite the trials.”

Those present at Rayerbazar also included NCP’s Member Secretary Akhtar Hossain, Chief Coordinator Nasiruddin Patwary, Senior Joint Chief Coordinator Abdul Hannan

Masud, and other party leaders.

Earlier, around 8:30am, Nahid and Akhtar led the NCP leaders to the National Memorial in Savar to pay homage to the martyrs of the Liberation War by placing wreaths. They then observed a one-minute silence.

Speaking to reporters there, Akhtar said the key principles of the independence achieved in 1971 – equality, human dignity and social justice – have remained elusive for 54 years.

“We, the leaders and activists of the NCP, are committed to building the Bangladesh that upholds the equality, human dignity and social justice of 1971. NCP will continue to work to build that Bangladesh, and we have many proposals for the whole of Bengal to see Bangladesh as a country that can stand tall in the world.”

At the same event, Nasiruddin Patwary mentioned that the party slogan “Inquilab Zindabad” has come up in discussions recently.

“We want to tell the whole of Bangladesh and the whole world that the people of Bangladesh will write Inquilab Zindabad across the whole sky, inshaAllah.”

continue to work with the US through all available channels in a calm manner,” he told a press conference. “We only have one plan – to win and to survive. Either we win, or the Plan B will be written by someone else.”

Zelensky himself stayed silent over the aid freeze.

Russia said the suspension of US Ukraine aid was the “best contribution” to peace, Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov said, adding that it was a “solution which could really push the Kyiv regime to a peace process”.

Europeans are racing to boost their own military spending and European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen yesterday unveiled proposals to boost spending on defence in the EU, which she said could mobilise up to 800 billion euros ($840 billion). The EU is holding an emergency summit tomorrow.

Meanwhile, Russia said yesterday that any normalisation of relations with the United States would require the lifting of sanctions against Moscow.

“It is probably too early to say anything. We have not heard any official statements, but in any case, our attitude towards sanctions is well known, we consider them illegal,” Peskov said.

“And, of course, if we talk about normalising bilateral relations, they need to be freed from this negative burden of so-called sanctions,” he added.

Rural areas to get 2,000 more doctors Says Rizwana after advisory council meeting

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The government will recruit 2,000 additional doctors to strengthen healthcare services in rural areas, said Environment Adviser Syeda Rizwana Hasan yesterday.

This will be in addition to the ongoing recruitment of 3,493 doctors through the Public Service Commission (PSC), she told the media at the Foreign Service Academy following a meeting of the advisers' council.

The adviser emphasised that rural communities are not receiving adequate healthcare and that the government is taking steps to bridge this gap by appointing the 2,000 doctors.

She also mentioned that Energy Adviser Muhammad Fouzul Kabir Khan recently visited Saudi Arabia and met with Saudi Aramco, the world's largest LNG supplier.

"We currently import LNG from Qatar and Oman.
Aramco has agreed to supply LNG to us at lower prices," she said.

The advisory council also decided to rename two institutions -- the Bangabandhu Science and Technology Fellowship Trust and the Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman Novo Theatre.

"The name of Bangabandhu will be omitted from the two institutions," said Rizwana.

Additionally, the council reviewed its progress, reporting that out of 135 decisions made, 92 (about 68 percent) have already been implemented.

"This is good progress," said Rizwana, adding that the council also agreed to set global standards for regulating saturated fat content in food products.

ST MARTIN'S ISLAND

Tourism curb sparks ecological revival

MOKAMMEL SHUVO

Abdul Aziz, a resident of St Martin's Island in Teknaf upazila of Cox's Bazar, was on a morning walk along the island's southern shoreline when he noticed a thick layer of snail and oyster shells deposited along the coastal kaya trees.

In recent days, the number of snails and oysters washing ashore has visibly increased.

"These changes might be happening because the island has remained undisturbed for over a month after the tourist season ended," said Aziz, an environmental activist.

Speaking to locals, it was learned that the island's biodiversity is undergoing a remarkable restoration.

A layer of snail and oyster shells has sedimented along the shoreline, the number of turtles arriving to lay eggs has increased, and mangrove forests in different parts of the island are flourishing as human and vehicular movement has significantly declined.

Local resident Joyanal Abedin said a mangrove forest is emerging over more than an acre of rocky coastline in the island's southern region, including Diyar Matha.

Md Jamir Uddin, deputy director of the Department of Environment's (DoE) Cox's Bazar office, said with tourist activities and battery-powered vehicles restricted, at least seven to eight kilometres of beach along the island's southeast and west have seen an accumulation of seashells.

These shells help prevent beach erosion and protect the island's dunes. Previously, locals collected and sold these shells to traders who used them to make showpieces and jewellery.

He said drones were used to locate waste deposits, leading to the collection of over 930 kilogrammes of waste in a cleanup operation that began on February 12.

Around 90 percent of the waste consisted of chips packets, polythene bags, and biscuit wrappers.

He said the number of Olive Ridley turtles coming to the island to lay eggs is rising, as artificial lights and loudspeakers -- major deterrents for turtles -- have been restricted.

Authorities are also protecting the turtles and their eggs from stray dogs that previously attacked them.

The DSA Victims Network, a platform of 28 individuals

it added.

case.

The Appellate Division of the SC yesterday fixed tomorrow for delivering the verdict on the appeal
filed by Gias Uddin Al Mamun challenging the HC judgement.

A four-member bench
of the Appellate Division headed by Chief Justice Syed Refaat Ahmed set the date after concluding hearing on the matter.

In 2013, the lower court acquitted Tarique and but jailed him for seven years and fined him Tk 40 crore.

per class will be reserved, beyond the allocated lottery-based admission seats, for family members of those injured or killed in the July uprising. To claim this seat, applicants must submit verified copies of relevant documents or gazettes as proof and present the original documents at the time of admission. The admission process must ensure proper verification of gazettes issued by the Ministry of Liberation War Affairs for the martyrs of the uprising. If no eligible students from affected families apply, the seat will be filled from the merit list. Under no circumstances should the seat remain vacant, said the directive.

SC verdict on Tarique

Following an appeal filed by the ACC, the HC on July 21, 2016, sentenced Tarique to seven years' imprisonment and fined him Tk 20 crore and also upheld the trial court judgement that convicted and sentenced Mamun to seven years' imprisonment and fined him Tk 40 crore in the same case, he said. ACC filed the case in October 2009 with Cantonment Police Station against Tarique and Mamun on charge of laundering Tk 20.41 crore to Singapore between 2003 and 2007.

Tourism curb sparks

Various studies have identified 1,076 species of biodiversity on St Martin's, including corals, seaweed, turtles, shellfish, marine fish, birds, mammals, and crabs. The island's sandy shores are a critical nesting site for endangered turtles. However, unregulated infrastructure development, excessive tourism, and environmental pollution have put the island's ecosystem at risk.

To protect the island, authorities set a deadline of January 31 for tourist visits this year, allowing only 2,000 visitors per day for two months. In previous years, the island remained open for tourists from October to April, with over 5,000 visitors arriving daily. Due to unchecked tourism, the island's biodiversity was being destroyed, said environmental activists. Tourists roamed every corner of the island on battery-run vehicles or motorbikes, which damaged the beach and mangrove forests. They also took away snail and oyster shells. Last year, conservationists collected around 1,400 turtle eggs from 13 turtles. This breeding season, they have already collected 2,500 eggs from 19 turtles. Over 160 eggs have hatched, and the baby turtles have been released into the sea. In 1999, the DoE declared St Martin's an Ecologically Critical Area. On January 4, 2023, the environment ministry designated 1,743 square kilometres of the Bay of Bengal adjacent to St Martin's as a Marine Protected Area.

However, Habibur Rahman, a former member of St Martin's Union Parishad, said some marginalised people are breaking corals into small pieces to sell as construction materials. Local people and hoteliers are buying these stones. "They are doing this because their income has dropped significantly due to the restrictions on tourism," he said.

Despite the tourism curbs, many locals continue fishing, drying fish for trade, and cultivating vegetables and watermelons for their livelihoods.

'We stay out of political debate'

Consensus Commission's report, we cannot determine what is feasible. Our preparations are based on existing laws and regulations."

Speaking on the issue of the NID system, Nasir Uddin said the government is exploring ways to consolidate all citizen services under one platform.

"I had assumed that the government would establish an entity where all citizen services – including NID – would be provided under the Election Commission," he said.

He, however, said, "I have not heard of any government decision to remove the NID system from the Election Commission's jurisdiction."

He further explained, "The Ministry of Home Affairs attempted to take over the NID system and even passed a law for it. But we were able to convince the government that such a move would not be appropriate."

"It's not just about taking NID away from us and considering the matter settled. That should not be the case, and I don't believe it will happen," he added.

He also mentioned that Election Commission representatives are actively participating in government meetings on this issue and sharing their opinions.

"The Election Commission has taken a stand, and we will formally communicate it in writing. We have explained why the NID system should remain under our jurisdiction and conveyed our reasoning through our representatives," said the CEC.

Regarding whether a consensus-based decision would be accepted, the CEC said, "If the National Consensus Commission reaches a decision, I won't be able to object. The government will discuss this matter with different political parties – that's a separate issue. We will express our views whenever we have the opportunity."

government's key commitments was to repeal all repressive laws, including the CSA, and this was officially announced in August.

However, the government has yet to repeal the act, it said, adding that they believed that the government lacks genuine commitment, seriousness, and proactive efforts to repeal the CSA and other repressive laws.

"This negligence is killing the spirit of the July Uprising. Due to incompetence and inefficiency, the interim government is gradually losing the trust of the people," the statement read.

The platform also warned that the law and order situation is deteriorating, with conspirators taking matters into their own hands, issuing death threats, and fuelling mob justice.

Meanwhile, the police are showing excessive enthusiasm in making arrests and persecuting individuals under the CSA, while turning a blind eye to the aforementioned criminal offences, it added.

The network also criticised the proposed Cyber Protection Act, calling it a misguided initiative.

"The fear surrounding the Cyber Security Act will not be alleviated by this new legislation. Instead, the government should modernise existing laws on cyber hacking, online violence against women, and pornography – or enact specific laws to address these issues. This is what the people of post-uprising Bangladesh expect," said the statement.

They demanded the immediate repeal of all repressive laws, including CSA, the release of those imprisoned under them, compensation for victims, and accountability for the government's actions in enforcing such laws.

Signatories of the statement include photographer Shahidul Alam, Jagannath University student Khadijatul Kubra, DSA Victims Network Member Secretary Pritam Das, Supreme Court lawyer Manjila Jhuma, and journalist Jamal Mir.

Govt officer suspended for assaulting driver

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Rajshahi

The Ministry of Social Welfare has suspended Md Jahid Hasan, the upazila social services officer of Paba, Rajshahi, following allegations of assaulting an auto-rickshaw driver, said an official order issued on Monday.

The suspension follows a viral video showing Jahid severely beating the driver – first with his shoe and then with a stick. Several national and local newspapers reported the incident on February 28, 2025.

Although the assault took place on February 2, it gained attention after the video surfaced online on February 28.

In its order, the ministry said Jahid's actions were inappropriate, violated professional discipline, and severely damaged the reputation of both the Department of Social Services and the Ministry of Social Welfare.

Two women fry puffed rice using hot sand and saltwater in a clay pot over an earthen stove. With high demand during Ramadan, they work from 3:00am to 8:00am, preparing several kilogrammes for sale in the market. The photo was taken at Bhorotkathi village in Jhalakathi yesterday.

BCC launches all-out mosquito drive

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Barishal

Amid a surge in mosquito population, Barishal City Corporation launched an all-out mosquito control drive yesterday afternoon.

The campaign, slated to continue till March 12, has been initially launched in wards 10 and 29 before expanding to all other wards under BCC.

The initiative kicked off with cleanliness operations and public awareness campaigns in the two wards.

As part of this initiative, unclean households will be identified and sent official notices. If the residents fail to clean their premises within the drive's duration, they may face fines, according to BCC officials.

Loose soybean oil fixed at Tk 160 a litre in Ctg

STAFF CORRESPONDENT, Ctg

The district administration yesterday fixed retail price of loose soybean oil at Tk 160 per litre across Chattogram district.

The decision came at a meeting organised by Chattogram District Administration at Chattogram Circuit House and made effective from the same day. It will remain effective till April 10.

Chattogram City Corporation Mayor Shahadat Hossain was present as chief guest in the meeting, chaired by Farida Khanam, deputy commissioner of Chattogram.

Senior officials from businesses including TK and City Group, importers of edible oil, trader leaders from Khatunganj wholesale market, and representatives of consumer organisations were also present.

"From today [Tuesday], loose soybean oil will be sold retail at Tk 160 per litre. Action will be taken if complaints are received against anyone selling at a higher price," Shahadat said.

On Monday, the CCC mayor and Chattogram DC visited Khatunganj, the country's largest wholesale market of daily essentials, amid the ongoing supply crisis of bottled soybean oil.

Fallout of USAID funding cuts

Govt and NGOs should collaborate to keep key projects alive

Like many countries, Bangladesh was caught off guard by the speed and extent of USAID funding cuts under the Trump administration. Although there is no official data on how many people have lost, or may lose, their jobs due to the freezing of funds, estimates from the development sector suggest that between 30,000 and 40,000 people may be affected. This is deeply concerning, particularly because it will put significant strain on the economy.

According to diplomatic sources, USAID provides Bangladesh with $300-400 million annually for health, nutrition, agriculture, livelihoods, labour rights, human trafficking prevention, and democratic development. These funds have been instrumental in Bangladesh's progress in areas such as maternal health, climate resilience, and rural development. However, following Donald Trump's inauguration as US president on January 20, his administration swiftly suspended most USAID funding and activities, except for emergency food aid, including assistance for Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh. This move has not only left thousands of development workers unemployed but also cast severe doubt over the future of various development projects.

Many of these now unfunded projects serve the most vulnerable segments of our society. Whether providing crucial immunisations, essential medicines, affordable birth control, or income-generating opportunities for the poor, their loss will have a far-reaching impact. Some projects also focus on promoting workers' rights or supporting labour-related cases. With funding now frozen, many of these labour rights initiatives could be sidelined, leaving workers even more vulnerable to exploitation. In a country like Bangladesh, where a significant portion of the workforce is employed in the informal sector with weak labour protections, this could be devastating.

Many development projects currently facing an existential crisis are similarly essential not only for their beneficiaries but also for society at large. As such, the government must not allow them to collapse. It should instead conduct a thorough evaluation to identify the most critical initiatives and explore ways to sustain them. This could include direct government funding for the high-priority projects, partnerships with international organisations, or securing alternative donor support. NGOs, too, must adapt by assessing their efficiency, optimising operational costs, and exploring sustainable funding sources. Without compromising beneficiary support, they should implement cost-saving measures and seek collaborations with the private sector, philanthropic institutions, and public-private partnerships to reduce dependency on foreign aid.

The USAID funding cuts have posed a serious challenge, but they also underscored the need for a more self-reliant development model. A coordinated approach by the government, NGOs, and the private sector is therefore essential to ensure that crucial programmes continue to serve those who need them most.

Expedite textbook delivery

NCTB's poor planning is disrupting academic activities

It is deeply disappointing that three months into the new academic year, many school and madrasa students under the national curricula are still without their full set of textbooks, which is severely hampering their studies. According to a Prothom Alo report, the National Curriculum and Textbook Board (NCTB) was supposed to deliver a total of 39.5 crore books to four crore students at the start of the year, but as of the first week of March, over 6.38 crore books remain undelivered. Of them, 6.22 crore are meant for secondary-level students, including those in Ebtedayee madrasas.

As many of us would already know, several factors have impeded the delivery of textbooks this year, including book revisions, the reversion to an older curriculum, the decision to assign printing exclusively to local printers, and delays in tendering, approvals, contracts, etc. However, industry sources told Prothom Alo that NCTB's poor planning was a key factor in this setback. In fact, insiders had predicted last year that textbook distribution would not be complete before March, despite NCTB's claims that it would be done by mid-January. Printers had warned of a paper shortage, as much of it is apparently imported from China. Yet, three months later, the same issue persists, with NCTB now blaming printers for failing to secure alternative suppliers and complete the job on time. Why the textbook board did not address this problem earlier—before awarding printing contracts—is a mystery to us.

By now, NCTB's inefficiencies are nothing new. We witnessed a number of hiccups throughout the textbook revision and printing process, with the government body omitting as well as printing wrong information in revised books. Unfortunately, it is students who bear the brunt of these errors and failures, as delays in receiving books directly affect their learning and exam preparation. Under the circumstances, penalising printers, who failed to meet deadlines, is not enough; NCTB officials must also be held accountable. They must explain why a contingency plan was not in place to prevent such delays.

There is also scepticism over NCTB's latest deadline of March 10 for completing textbook distribution, as schools will remain closed throughout Ramadan. We hope this does not become yet another example of NCTB's poor planning. The authorities must ensure that such disruptions do not recur.

SPECIAL POWERS ACT, 1974

Bangladesh's forgotten villain

MIND THE GAP
Barrister Noshin Nawal is an activist, feminist, and a columnist for The Daily Star. She can be reached at nawalnoshin1@gmail.com.

NOSHIN NAWAL

Bangladesh has a curious love affair with villains—particularly those neatly wrapped up in legal jargon. Mention the Digital Security Act (DSA) or the Information and Communication Technology Act (ICT) at your next coffee catch-up, and you'll witness rants more passionate than your melodramatic cousin's Facebook poetry. But casually bring up the Special Powers Act (SPA), 1974, and watch the room go eerily quiet, as though you've referenced an awkward family scandal nobody wishes to recall. It's our quietly menacing dinosaur, a relic still lurking unnoticed in our legal attic—outdated, oppressive, and embarrassingly overdue for retirement.

The Special Powers Act isn't merely another oppressive law—it's the patriarch of Bangladesh's infamous "black laws," a term lovingly reserved for legislation designed primarily to silence anyone who dares to disagree with those in power. Born in the chaotic year of 1974—presumably when human rights were as optional as side dishes at a wedding—it hands the government a chilling ability to detain individuals without bothering with formal charges or pesky courtroom procedures. Initially, the detention is for six months, but here's the diabolical detail: these six-month periods can be renewed indefinitely. Think of it as Bangladesh's own twisted version of Hotel California—you can attempt to check out anytime, but good luck actually leaving.

What's especially alarming is how comfortably the SPA tramples over constitutional protections that are supposed to be sacred. According to Article 33(l) of the Bangladesh Constitution, any arrested individual must be promptly informed of their alleged crime and must have access to legal counsel. Additionally, Article 32 explicitly guarantees protection against arbitrary deprivation of life and liberty. Yet under the SPA, detainees frequently find themselves in a Kafkaesque nightmare—imprisoned indefinitely without knowing their supposed wrongdoing, without lawyers, and without recourse. It casually shreds the principle of habeas corpus, a cornerstone of any legitimate democracy, as if tossing away an unwanted food delivery flyer.

This form of preventive detention cheerfully ignores fundamental due process, casually discarding the rights to a fair trial and presumption of innocence, concepts our constitution claims to uphold. Terms like "prejudicial to national security" or "disturbing public order" are deliberately vague, conveniently allowing authorities to target virtually anyone—from outspoken journalists and opposition figures to students whose only crime is to exercise their democratic rights.

Ironically, while activists justifiably raise hell over digital censorship via the DSA, the SPA goes quietly unnoticed, merrily detaining people without causing hashtags, tweets, or even the mildest online outrage. Amnesty International and Human Rights Forum Bangladesh have previously pointed to thousands of SPA detentions, citing devastated families, disrupted careers, and traumatised communities. Yet somehow, the SPA remains invisible in everyday conversations—too old-fashioned, perhaps, to fit neatly into viral social media campaigns.

The political hypocrisy around this law is staggering. Every major party, when out of power, rails vehemently against the SPA, vowing passionately to erase it from the books the moment they assume power. Predictably, once seated comfortably in office, they conveniently discover its usefulness. It becomes their favourite broom, sweeping away political irritations quietly and efficiently. It's become a tragically predictable cycle—opposition outrage quickly fades into governmental complacency.

twice as outdated. This dissatisfaction is real, even if it isn't trending on Instagram. The lack of information and conversation around this topic is equally concerning.

Despite its severity, the SPA has mostly escaped international scrutiny, mainly because it's quietly old-school compared to flashier digital laws. Even as Amnesty International reported worrying spikes in SPA detentions during the previous election unrest, global and local outrage barely surfaced. It seems detention doesn't count unless it comes with trending hashtags and retweets.

Behind the legal jargon, families bear the genuine cost of this act. Loved ones vanish into detention, leaving behind confused and traumatised

It would finally honour constitutional promises made under Articles 32 and 33(l), bringing Bangladesh closer to genuine democracy.

So, next time you sit with friends, passionately dissecting the latest digital outrage over overpriced cappuccinos, perhaps spare a thought (and a hashtag) for this quietly terrifying villain. The Special Powers Act has lurked in our shadows since 1974—far too long, and far too damaging, to continue going unnoticed.

It's high time Bangladesh finally confronted this sinister dinosaur. Let's consign it where it belongs: safely in history's junkyard, alongside outdated rotary phones, embarrassingly wide bell-bottom pants, and every other idea best left firmly in the past.

Is smoking the problem, or that women are doing it?

Naziba Basher is a journalist at The Daily Star.

NAZIBA BASHER

A leisurely chat over a cup of tea and a quick smoke hardly has an ominous ring or suggest any associated danger—other than the consumption of tobacco and sugar, of course. Yet, that is exactly what turned out to be a nightmare for two people at a tea stall in Dhaka's Lalmatia area on Saturday. The only reason was that they were women.

An elderly man took offence and remarked that women should not be allowed to smoke there, at which the two women were duly offended. An altercation ensued with slurs quickly turning into slaps. In an appalling turn of events, the persecutor, a man well into his 60s, managed to incite a mob, calling the women "whores" for smoking in public. The mob pounced on the women. They were abused, harassed and assaulted. They were injured and parts of their clothes were ripped off. All because they smoked in public. Taken away into police custody, the two were then told not to file a complaint.

When asked about the matter later, Home Affairs Adviser Lt Gen (ret'd) Jahangir Alam Chowdhury duly noted that smoking in public is an offence—whether the laws against public smoking applied in this case could be a matter of debate—and that people should refrain from this habit. He also remarked that there had been a spat between the women and the old man, and that one of the women had apparently splashed tea on the man, thus triggering the whole incident.

However, the home adviser did not, for once, note the criminal nature of what the men had done to those women.

The Penal Code, 1860 in Bangladesh criminalises sexual assault against women, criminal force with intent to dishonour, and attempt of wrongful confinement of women (sections 354, 355 and 375), all of which apply to the mob and the elderly villain in question—all of them men, by the way, and perhaps many smokers among them too.

It is not about the consumption of tobacco (chewing zarda, for instance) but the act of smoking by women that is generally associated with Westernised rebelliousness, that almost automatically lends itself to "bad character." Women who smoke are frequently labelled as "wayward," implying they lack traditional values. Not for men, though. For them it might be seen as an added layer of appeal—a show of masculinity, even.

This double standard is deeply rooted in subcontinental gender norms, cultural expectations, and moral policing, which dictate that women should embody ideals of modesty, virtue, and domesticity.

In a justified show of outrage, people protested, many women among them. On Monday, protesters under the banner of "Bangladesh Against Rape and Oppression" staged a demonstration protesting what happened in Lalmatia, burning an effigy of the home adviser and demanding his resignation. They argued that while smoking in public may be subject to legal restrictions, it does not justify physical assault. They also criticised the adviser for failing to acknowledge the criminal actions perpetrated by the attackers against the two women in Lalmatia.

This is not at all about encouraging women—or men—to smoke. Smoking is harmful for both men and women. It increases the risk of lung cancer, other forms of cancer, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), chronic bronchitis, and emphysema, cardiovascular diseases, hypertension, strokes, hormonal imbalances, and fertility issues for BOTH male and female smokers. No, it is about the male chauvinistic mindset that sets unreasonable standards for one gender and not the other. The same mindset spills into other spheres of public life—participation in sports, attire or even the nature of employment—with equal toxicity.

What happened in Lalmatia and our home adviser's response that followed had nothing to do with smoking. They only proved themselves as two more specimens confirming the stereotype which is easily threatened. It is quite simply discrimination. The same turn of events would have been quite beyond the question if it were two men.

It was never about smoking. It is just that women were doing it, and perhaps seen to be invading what is deemed to be men's territory. Feminist movements, urban youth cultures, and changing attitudes are slowly pushing back against these outdated norms, but incidents like the one in Lalmatia show that there is still a long way to go. But we will continue to raise our voice against injustice and gender-based violence.

With or without a cigarette between the fingers.

Trump and Zelensky: Is the damage irreparable?

Ramisa Rob
is in charge of Geopolitical Insights at The Daily Star.

RAMISA ROB

US President Donald Trump and the Republicans gave many indications that they were not fans of the Biden-era foreign policy towards Russia's invasion of Ukraine, which was sticking with Ukraine for "as long as it takes." Before his second inauguration, what Trump would do with US military support for Ukraine was a tense topic under his "America First" transactional foreign policy. Then it really exploded, much beyond the worst nightmare of European leaders. Vice-President JD Vance and Trump attacked Ukraine's President Volodymyr Zelensky, with Trump going on to accuse Zelensky of playing with "World War III." During the internationally televised meltdown, the message was clear, if it had not been before: in the current US foreign policy, the US is only interested in supporting Ukraine if it serves the current president and his administration's broader political goals.

Underpinning what was largely an unstrategic—not to mention immoral—and ill-tempered treatment of the Ukrainian leader, is Trump's larger vision that the post-World War II-era geopolitics is one that has led to what he calls "America's decline." For Trump, it's always, "What's in it for me?" And that policy is framed as "America First." But Trump's notions about what is to his advantage remains questionable. He believes that his country has the power to secure any deal under him, similar to Zelensky's foe, Russian President Vladimir Putin. Trump has broken ranks with European leaders on Putin. Before Zelensky's visit, he called the Ukrainian leader a dictator, and said Putin should be allowed to return to G7, from which he was expelled in 2014 after annexing Crimea.

On Monday, the US president paused all military aid to Ukraine, as reported by Bloomberg. Prior to the news, Trump had again taken to social media to chide Zelensky's assessment of the war with Russia. In a social media post, pointing to recent comments in which Zelensky said the end of his country's war with Russia remains far off, Trump said the US "will not put up with it for much longer," adding that Zelensky's assessment was "the worst statement that could have been made." To reporters on Monday afternoon, Trump continued to suggest that Zelensky "doesn't want to make a deal," and that one could "be made very fast." Trump went on to say he believed that "Russia wants to make a deal," and that "certainly, the people of Ukraine want to make a deal. They've suffered more than anybody else."

The warnings from the meltdown—and the clear fact that Trump openly dislikes Zelensky—extended to Europe. Zelensky left early; the deal to offer Ukraine's rarest minerals to the US remained unsigned on the table. European leaders have stepped up, and the UK has taken on an urgency to seize the moment. The UK signed a $2 billion deal with Ukraine and paved a way for the country to tap into Russian frozen assets, which have been under Europe's jurisdiction. The deal will allow Ukraine to use export finance to buy more than 5,000 air defence missiles, which will be made in Belfast.

On Monday, while Trump continued to sideline Ukraine, British Prime Minister Keir Starmer also declared a four point plan for Ukraine, which included a "coalition of the willing" that would come together to draw up a peace plan to end the war. He said he would present it to the US president for his support. Unlike NATO and other alliances, "a coalition of willing" is designed to be palatable to the US president in the sense of nation-states that are willing to join in by not sending in their troops. The UK and France have mentioned that they are willing to commit troops in the event of a peace deal.

Starmer, European leaders, and Zelensky reiterated that the success of a peace deal would need strong US backing. Starmer told the UK members of parliament that Trump's commitment to achieving peace in Ukraine is "sincere." As the British prime minister spoke of the "heavy lifting" that Europe would have to do but reiterated the need for US support in the House of Commons, the US president posted on social media, saying, "Europe... stated flatly that they cannot do the job without the US—probably not a great statement to have been made in terms of a show of strength against Russia. What are they thinking?"

Trump's strangely antagonistic statements towards Europe on the issue of Ukraine, along with the bullying of Zelensky, has generated rifle speculations of US military aid cuts in the media. According to analysts, large spending cuts would definitely result in greater loss of life and could easily result in Ukraine losing the war.

The war is currently stalemated, but Russia has the initiative. Ukraine's defences on the eastern front are weak, though not breaking; it retains an enclave in Russia's Kursk region. Russia has made small but continuous gains in Ukraine's east since the Ukrainian counteroffensive halted in November 2023, but at a high cost. In 2024, the Russians suffered more than 420,000 casualties, and the combat losses since 2022 are set to cross one million by mid-year, and Putin has not yet called for a second mobilisation. The US provides Ukraine with the full spectrum of equipment that a military needs.

To understand the importance of the US, militarily for Ukraine: the packages run the gamut from heavy weapons to munitions—artillery shells and air defence missiles—to medical equipment and cold weather

12, Donald Trump said Ukraine would not recover all its territories or join NATO, and said he would meet with Russian strongman Vladimir Putin. On February 13, Trump broke ranks with G7 leaders, who expelled Russia after it annexed Crimea in 2014, and said Putin should be allowed to return. For Trump, his path to "peace" between Russia and Ukraine is an image of himself standing between the countries. He has not agreed to provide any reconsider the US as a steady ally, the prospects for Ukraine remain as bleak as ever. Trump continues his divisive language, but as we have seen before, his actions are often divorced from his words. US relations with Russia have always enjoyed a rare bipartisan consensus, even during recent times, despite talks of aid cuts. But the current atmosphere seems to have upended the earlier equation—for now. After the fiery meeting that drew gear supplies. According to the Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS), recent packages appear to provide the monthly production of equipment that is in short supply in the US, such as artillery shells, air defence systems, and anti-tank weapons. Around a dozen HIMARS to boost Ukrainian firepower and a dozen National Advanced Surface-to-Air Missile Systems (NASAMS) for air defence were contracted in 2022 and will soon appear on the battlefield in Ukraine.

The focus on military equipment should not discount the "soft" support—training and intelligence data, for example—that the US provides. Although such support cannot be counted in the same way that equipment can, it has been critical in building Ukraine's military capabilities, and Europe cannot replace the same intelligence as to when Russia would attack or not.

Trump's approach to the so-called "peace deal," which he keeps referring to, has so far included dialogue with Putin. On February security guarantees that Starmer has spoken of, and solely focused on the deal to open up Ukrainian minerals to US companies, arguing that the presence of US workers in Ukraine itself would discourage Russia from attacking or encroaching on the Ukrainian territory.

But if Trump's ultimate goal is normalisation with Moscow, and he is willing to make that deal, where is the line where he would settle with Putin? Vladimir Putin is not a reliable ally, with the robust track record of turning back on agreements, and if Trump wants to rewrite the history of the US and Russia, what are the concessions he would be willing to settle on with Russia? If those concessions come at the cost of Ukraine's sovereignty, neither Ukraine nor Europe would be onboard. On Monday, Kremlin spokesperson Dmitry Peskov told reporters, "We see that the collective West has begun to partially lose its unity."

While Zelensky has said the US-Ukraine relationship is salvageable, and Europe refuses to—on the diplomatic front—backlash, Trump's cabinet, such as Secretary of State Marco Rubio and others, continue to back him and have vaguely said that the efforts to end the war need a "reset." It is unclear whether the entire administration remains aligned with Trump on whatever position he has on normalising relations with Russia, but his critics have accused him of essentially selling out Ukraine.

In the coming days, the best case scenario would be the continuation of US and European aid to stabilise front lines, defend Russian attacks, and find a footing for a negotiated settlement, and perhaps Russia would be more willing to make a deal as its cost of war piles up, as casualties are looking to surpass a million. What will happen is frankly too soon to tell, but the way the meeting turned shouting match between Zelensky and Trump blew up on live television—juxtaposed with the new tone of US foreign policy—the writing is on the wall: expect the unexpected.

Why Palestinians are now worried about the ceasefire

Yousef SY Ramadan
is the ambassador of Palestine to Bangladesh.

YUSEF SY RAMADAN

In nearly eight decades of negotiating history between Israel and the Palestinians, the rule is enshrined that the weapon of the Palestinians' in the negotiations is their right and the paper that establishes it, and that Israel's weapon is the power of fire. In other words, we always find ourselves with the narrative that Israel is doing completely contrary to what was agreed, and that very dynamic also refers to the US, which is always accused of double standards; first, ensuring the interest of Israel in full, and second, ignoring rights for the Palestinians, which they claim to stand for, in engineering

Take for example, the Oslo Accords, signed in the White House and the aftermath that saw its promise utterly left unfulfilled for the rights of the Palestinians.

Palestine is at an immensely fragile position, where the ceasefire deal—a deal largely made by the US—could bring us back to square one. As widely known, the deal came in three stages: the first has advantages for both parties, and the second has more advantages for the Palestinians, in that it includes a more permanent withdrawal of Israeli troops and authorities' presence in Gaza, which they destroyed.

Israel blocked food and fuel from entering Gaza after the ceasefire's first phase expired on the night of March 1.

PHOTO: REUTERS

We have seen this game before: postponing the negotiations which save Trump's ally Netanyahu the precious time he needs to rearrange his cards in the Israeli political arena to remain in power. As long as the war continues, even in parallel with the temporary truce and exchange, Netanyahu will remain the ruler in Israel until the last day of his term, with renewed chances of reaching another term.

agreements throughout the years.

The judgement in this equation is always power in all its military, economic and alliance components.

In all the agreements and understandings reached, Israel was exercising its commitment to them on the measure of the gains it has achieved for Israel, and the harm inflicted on the Palestinians by dispensing with them.

Israel's fascist Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's office came minutes after the first phase ended, and as talks have begun on starting the second phase that's aimed at ending the war and seeing all remaining living hostages in Gaza returned home, he issued a statement describing a US proposal—a ceasefire extension through Passover, or April 20. On the first day, half the hostages, alive and dead, would be released. The rest would be released if agreement is reached on a permanent ceasefire. The extension would provide Israel with its desired advantages to continue illegal occupation, and the fate of the second and third phases are becoming determined, according to the unequal equation based on Israeli military force, which, even if not exercised, remains threatening enough.

Since the beginning of the first phase, Israel has been thinking, planning and working on how to defer the second phase and continue to deprive the Palestinians of its advantages, benefiting from the fact that the exchange will reduce the pressure from the Netanyahu government to bring home the Israeli hostages, and neutralise the hate against them, while also benefiting from the time factor that gives it valuable opportunities to officially and actually abolish the second phase.

The Palestinians and Arabs can now admit that what is happening now is a lack of even the minimum balance that came from Washington—the American position under the Biden administration was characterised by a synthetic duality. Now, it is to unconditionally give Israel everything it needs and beyond more than the means of war, and giving the Palestinians in return—very limited drops of financial support to beat all the lingering traumas from the atrocities they have witnessed, and lived through. The Trump administration has unequivocally moved the already-lopsided equation between the US and Israel in another direction, as the US is no longer a mediator but rather a direct party by giving Israel an open mandate to do to the Palestinians whatever it wants.

Recent events in other parts of the world also indicate it could get much more frightening and worse for the Middle East. The kind of US government which staunchly supported Ukraine against Russian invasion, selectively following international law, is also vanishing from Washington. Ukrainian President Zelensky's humiliation in the White House should be understood as greater and deeper than being a verbal quarrel between two presidents. It established the beginning of a dangerous era in which the creditor is a master and the debtor is a slave. Countries, including the Arab states, who could also be candidates for similar insults—as would be Europe—have the actual potential to save themselves and their prestige before the axe falls on the head. It is incumbent upon nations that still have power against Donald Trump to act before things take a turn for the worse.

We are already witnessing a pattern of behaviour in what is happening about Gaza, where the stages of the agreed deal are slyly being turned into one stage—which is only to be extended until the recovery of all Israeli hostages, living and dead, and then we will see everything that had nothing to do with what is written on the paper. We have seen this game before: postponing the negotiations which save Trump's ally Netanyahu the precious time he needs to rearrange his cards in the Israeli political arena to remain in power. As long as the war continues, even in parallel with the temporary truce and exchange, Netanyahu will remain the ruler in Israel until the last day of his term, with renewed chances of reaching another term.

The papers of agreements and understandings from the beginning of the Palestinian cause to the present day, have been burning in all rounds of its right struggle with the Israeli fire, to enshrine an equation that says: "What can the ink, paper, signatures, mediators and witnesses do with the fire other than burning and turning into ashes?"

Disarming 'a red line' amid Gaza truce impasse

Says Hamas leader as Israel demands 'full demilitarisation'

AGENCIES

Hamas leader Sami Abu Zuhri told AFP yesterday that disarming is a red line for his movement and other Palestinian groups in negotiations to extend the fragile Gaza ceasefire.

"Any talk about the resistance's weapons is nonsense. The resistance's weapons are a red line for Hamas and all resistance factions," Abu Zuhri said shortly after Israeli Foreign Minister Gideon Saar demanded the "full demilitarisation" of Gaza to proceed to the second stage of the January truce.

"We don't have an agreement on phase two. We demand total demilitarisation of Gaza, Hamas and Islamic Jihad out, and give us our hostages. If they agree to that we can implement tomorrow," Saar told a news conference in Jerusalem. He also charged that humanitarian aid had become the "number one source of revenue" for Hamas, as he defended his government's decision to block all deliveries to Gaza.

Arab leaders yesterday gathered in Cairo to discuss an alternative to a widely condemned plan from US President

- Arab summit draft communique adopts Egyptian plan for Gaza
- Hamas urges Arab summit to 'thwart' Gaza displacement plan

Donald Trump to assume control of war-battered Gaza and displace its Palestinian population.

A summit draft communique adopted an Egyptian plan for Gaza's future and called on the international community and financial institutions to provide support for the plan quickly, reports Reuters.

Hamas urged Arab leaders to "thwart" the relocation of Palestinians from Gaza.

"We look forward to an effective Arab role that ends the humanitarian tragedy created by the occupation in the Gaza Strip... and thwarts the (Israeli) occupation's plans to displace (Palestinians)," a statement by the group said.

After the first phase of the truce ended over the weekend without agreement on how to continue, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's office announced a halt to "all entry of goods and supplies" into the territory.

Israel's "closure of the Gaza Strip crossings for the third consecutive day, and its prevention of the entry of aid and goods, represents a Zionist insistence on violating the ceasefire agreement, and a clear war crime", Hamas said in its statement.

US MILITARY AID PAUSE Ukrainians see Trump helping Putin

AFP, Kyiv

Ukrainians were furious and in shock yesterday following a decision by US President Donald Trump to suspend military aid to Kyiv, saying the move played into the Kremlin's hands.

Denys Kazansky, a Ukrainian media commentator said that while Washington had paused military aid to Kyiv "North Korea and Iran did not stop military aid to Russia".

Both Moscow-allied countries have provided critical military support to the Russian military since the Kremlin launched its invasion in February 2022.

"We live in a reality where the United States has become an ally of North Korea, Russia and Iran and it is helping them carry out aggression against a European country," Kazansky added on social media.

Igor Romanenko, a military analyst who previously served in the Ukrainian army, said European countries would probably continue to support Kyiv but that aid would not make up for the loss of US military supplies.

"That is why we must rely on our own strength and reserves. This does not mean that we should despair," he said. He was optimistic Washington would not halt aid entirely but said it was unclear what kind of aid Ukraine might be able to rely on.

Sergiy Takhmazov, a member of the Ukrainian military, questioned how long Ukrainian would be able to hold out without US support for air defence systems and intelligence sharing. "All those who demand peace from us ignore that the price of our peace will be higher than the price of our war," said Pavlo Kazarin, a journalist.

WHO says it won't 'give up' after US aid funding cuts

AFP, Geneva

The World Health Organization (WHO) yesterday acknowledged that the US freeze on foreign aid funding has hit vital global health programmes but vowed to find a way to keep delivering to those in need.

The United Nations health agency said it was still too early to determine the full impact of the freeze on foreign aid spending by the United States -- traditionally the world's largest aid donor.

But WHO spokeswoman Margaret Harris admitted that some programmes had clearly been affected.

Putin hails Myanmar ties as junta chief visits Moscow

AFP, Moscow

President Vladimir Putin yesterday praised Russia's developing ties with Myanmar, during a visit by the Asian country's junta chief to its key ally.

Russia is a crucial arms supplier to the isolated state, which is struggling to quell violent opposition to the junta's military rule.

"The relations between our countries are steadily developing," Putin told junta chief Min Aung Hlaing in a televised meeting at the Kremlin.

"We have great potential," he said, hailing growing trade ties.

Min Aung Hlaing, who seized power in a 2021 coup, saluted Putin as a "king" and backed Moscow's full-scale military offensive on Ukraine.

"I believe that victory must be yours under your strong and decisive leadership," he told Putin.

Both countries are under heavy Western sanctions -- Myanmar following the 2021 coup and Russia after its 2014 annexation of Crimea and its ongoing three-year-long offensive on Ukraine.

2 explosive-laden cars ram into Pak military compound Six civilians killed

AFP, Peshawar

Two suicide bombers belonging to a militant group drove two explosive-laden cars into an army compound in northwestern Pakistan yesterday evening, triggering massive explosions, police told AFP.

"Suicide bombers rammed two explosives-laden vehicles into the entrance gate of Bannu Cantonment, triggering massive explosions... after which multiple militants attempted to storm the compound," a senior district police official said on condition of anonymity.

"Security forces present at the scene engaged them in a gunfight. Initial reports confirm that four militants have been killed," he said, adding that six civilians were killed.

Bannu, a district in Pakistan's turbulent Khyber Pakhtunkhwa province, lies adjacent to the country's formerly self-governed tribal areas and close to Afghanistan.

The attack was claimed by the Hafiz Gul Bahadur armed group, which actively supported the Afghan Taliban in its war against the US-led Nato coalition since 2001.

the National Identity Registration Act 2010. Bangladesh launched NID cards with photographs in 2007-2008, as part of updating the voter list.

The Directorate of Registration under the Law and Justice Division deals with the marriage and divorce data while the Directorate General of Health Services collects health data, including causes of death.

A new Birth and Death Registration Act was passed in 2004. The law allowed local government bodies and Bangladesh embassies abroad to register births and deaths. The Office of the Registrar General of Birth and Death under the Local Government Division was established in September 2013 to establish a permanent central database of birth and death records.

The authorities so far have issued birth certificates to at least 16.80 crore people. Birth registration is free if it is done within 45 days of a child's birth. For getting death certificates, children of deceased person should notify the authorities within 45 days of death.

Birth registration is needed for enrolment in educational institutions, registration for secondary school certificate examinations, applying for NID, passport, and driving licence.

Zahid Hossain, registrar general (Birth and Death Registration), told The Daily Star, "I believe that bringing NID and birth registration under one umbrella will expedite the delivery of citizen services."

An interim government adviser told The Daily Star yesterday that several advisers are in favour of keeping the NID activities under the EC.

Shipping Adviser Brig Gen (ret'd) Sakhawat Hussain, who is also a former election commissioner, told this newspaper that they would look into the matter when the draft ordinance is placed before them.

Earlier in May 2021, the government took an initiative to shift services relating to NID cards to the Security Services Division under the home ministry from the EC.

Ignoring objections of EC officials, the National Identity Registration Bill was passed in parliament in September 2023. The bill aimed to transfer the national identity registration operation from the EC to the home ministry's Security Services Division.

The interim government in mid-January repealed the new law paving the way for returning the NID services to the EC.

Deceased were Jamaat members

When asked about the possible motive behind the killings, the SP said, "We don't rule out any possibilities, and we are investigating the incident. We tried to find CCTV footage but failed to get it as there was none."

"Police found a blood-stained pistol at the spot, and upon inspecting the firearm, police suspect that the pistol might have been looted from a government office right after the July uprising," the SP said.

Police and local sources said Nezam returned to Kanchana union after the fall of the Awami League government on August 5 last year.

Around the same time, other Jamaat men started to return and began taking control of different business establishments and other assets.

Nezam and some Jamaat men had a rivalry with other local influentials.

However, Chattogram South District Jamaat's spokesperson Ayub Ali said in a press statement, "It's a planned murder. The area where the two were gruesomely beaten to death has long been a crime-prone area. A group has been trying to take control of the hills, trees, and brick kilns in the area."

"In the name of an arbitration meeting, the victims were called to that area and later beaten to death," said the press release.

No case had been filed till the filing of this report at 6:00pm yesterday.

The case statement further mentions that around 10:00am on February 24, air force personnel detained and allegedly tortured a local youth, triggering anger among residents.

When locals attempted to rescue him, a clash erupted. Nahid, who went near the house of a local named Nayeem to see what was happening, was shot in the head. Air force personnel then took him away and wasted time in taking him to the hospital. He died due to excessive bleeding, read the case statement.

Air Force Sergeant Md Ziaul Haque in his case filed on February 27 named Rahat Iqbal alias Iqbal Bahar, 42, and Ejabat Ullah, 43, along with 300 unidentified individuals.

Cox's Bazar Sadar Model Police Station OC Md Elias Khan said that investigations into both cases are ongoing.

"The autopsy report will confirm how Nahid died," he said.

While Nahid's family and locals claim he was shot, the police inquest report does not mention gunshot wounds. The report, prepared at the hospital morgue by SI Muhammad Ali Uddin of Cox's Bazar Sadar Model Police Station, reads that Nahid had a six-to-seven-inch-deep hole in his skull, with his brain completely exposed.

While acknowledging the technical complexities involved, he said initial financial assistance had been provided to encourage his efforts.

The victims claimed that $950 and three iPhones were stolen from their possession during the attack.

A video of the mob attack circulated on social media following the incident.

The injured Iranians were taken to Kurmitola General Hospital for treatment. They were later escorted back to their Banani hotel.

Bhatara Police Station Officer-in-Charge Md Mazharul Islam said that the incident originated from a dispute over the money exchange rate. "However, the whole story is yet to be clear. A case is being prepared."

He added that police are trying to find the alleged thieves.

India break Australia jinx and Ravindra Jadeja took two wickets each.

India will now face the winner of the today's second semifinal between South Africa and New Zealand in Sunday's final in a bid to become the first team to win the tournament three times.

The outcome also means that the final of the tournament will be played in Dubai, not Lahore.

The last ODI between the two sides was the final of the 2023 World Cup, which ended in a heartbreaking loss for India in front of a home crowd.

But this time, after not allowing Australia to post an imposing target on the board, India pulled off a comfortable chase where they looked mostly in command with a few minor bumps along the way.

After India lost Shubman Gill (eight off 11) and skipper Rohit Sharma (28 off 29) in the Powerplay, Kohli took control of the chase, forming a 91-run partnership with Iyer for the third wicket, followed by a 44-run stand with Axar Patel (27 off 30) and a 47-run partnership with Rahul.

However, Australia was also guilty of relieving Kohli when he was on 51, with Glenn Maxwell diving to his right but failing to hold onto a catch at short mid off of the bowling off Zampa.

Kohli made Australia pay for that dropped chance and although he could not finish the chase, getting caught off Zampa at long on in the 43rd over, Rahul and Pandya ensured India went over the line.

Earlier, Australia lost opener Cooper Connolly for a nine-ball duck off Shami before Travis Head hit back with a flurry of fours and two sixes to raise memories of his onslaught against India in the 2023 World Cup final won by Australia.

But wrist spinner Chakravarthy struck on his second ball to get Head caught out at long off for 39 off 33 balls. Smith and Marnus Labuschagne chipped away against the spinners in the middle phase and Carey played his shots in the final overs, but India kept picking wickets in regular intervals and eventually bundled them out for a gettable total.

Experts have warned the higher import costs could push up prices for consumers, complicating efforts to bring down inflation.

That includes at grocery stores -- Mexico supplied 63 percent of US vegetable imports and nearly half of US fruit and nut imports in 2023, according to the US Department of Agriculture.

Housing costs could also be hit. More than 70 percent of imports of two key materials homebuilders need -- softwood lumber and gypsum -- come from Canada and Mexico, said the National Association of Home Builders.

Truck drivers at the Otay Mesa

Work was drying up because many companies in the Mexican border city of Tijuana export Chinese goods, said driver Angel Cervantes.

"And since the tariffs are also against China, work is going down for the (transport) companies," he added.

Travel fatigue hot topic ahead of NZ-SA semifinal

SAMSUL AREFIN KHAN from Lahore

Travel fatigue was the hot topic in both New Zealand and South Africa camps right before their semifinal clash of the ongoing ICC Champions Trophy but both sides were adamant to keep this issue on the sideline and focus on the task at hand at Lahore's Gaddafi Stadium today. Both the Kiwis and the Proteas reached Lahore from Dubai on Monday in separate flights, with New Zealand arriving in the morning and South Africa reaching in the evening. The Black Caps left Dubai a couple of hours after their final Group A fixture against India on Sunday, which they lost by 44 runs. Meanwhile, South Africa travelled back to Dubai after beating England in their last Group B match because if India had lost to New Zealand on Sunday, then the Proteas would have had to face the Indians in the first semifinal, which took place yesterday. But as India had won that game, the Proteas had to fly back to Pakistan to face New Zealand in the semifinal. "I think scheduling is an issue just all around," New Zealand skipper Mitchell Santner, who looked exhausted due to travel fatigue, said during the official press conference in Lahore yesterday. "I think when you do have time to rest and recover, I think it's very important with the quick turnaround of games. One-day cricket can be quite exhausting on the body, so I think for us today [Tuesday] it might be making sure the bowlers are ready for tomorrow [today]." Although all New Zealand players attend ed their scheduled practice session at the Gaddafi Stadium yesterday noon, their training was limited to some light warm-ups. Meanwhile, South Africa had their practice session at the same venue under floodlights. "I think, logistically, things could have been, I guess, more efficient... We definitely don't use that as an excuse in terms of our preparation or anything like that. Our mind is geared to what we need to do for tomorrow [today]," South Africa skipper Temba Bavuma said in his press meet in the evening. South Africa and New Zealand have won this competition before, with the former winning the inaugural edition in 1998 and the latter winning it in 2000. However, both sides have a reputation of faltering in the final hurdle with the Kiwis finishing as runners up in the 2015 and 2019 ODI World Cup and 2021 T20 World Cup and South Africa finishing second in 2024 T20 World Cup. Both teams, who last faced off in a knockout fixture in the 2015 ODI World Cup, will be looking to first qualify for the final on March 9 and this time go all the way.

South Africa and New Zealand have locked horns 73 times in ODIs, with the Proteas holding a dominant record, winning 42 matches compared to Black Caps' 26 wins.

It's, however, even-steven between the two in the ICC Champions Trophy, with South Africa winning one and New Zealand winning the other in the two sides' two meetings in the tournament.

Shoriful shines in Rupganj's opener

SPORTS REPORTER

National team pacer Shoriful Islam was on fire in the early morning for Legends of Rupganj, picking up a four for against Gazi Group to help his side to a 10-wicket win in their Dhaka Premier League fixture at BKSP Ground 3 yesterday. Rupganj has built a strong unit this season with a string of national team stars and Shoriful landed early blows in the very first over. He picked up Gazi captain Anamul Haque Bijoy on the very first delivery of the innings, a lucky caught-behind decision with the ball appearing to nick the thigh before going to the wicket-keeper. A gem of a delivery saw Mohammad Salman back in the dugout in the fifth delivery. Shoriful then sent back Aminul Islam Biplob and Parvez Hossain Jibon for ducks. When Shoriful's national teammate Tanzim Sakib castled Shamsur Rahman for a duck next over, Gazi had slumped to six down for four in the fourth over. The competitiveness ended there with some lower-order runs seeing Gazi eventually bowled out for 93. Tanzid Tamim hit an unbeaten 46-ball 65 as Rupganj coasted to the win in 13.5 overs. Shinepukur won by 77 runs against Partex Sporting in another game at BKSP Ground 4 as Rayan Rafsan's 81-ball 87 saw Shinepukur put on 298 for five. Partex were bowled out for 221 following a cumbersome batting effort as Al Fahad and Rafiuzzaman Rafi scalped three wickets each. Nurul Hasan Sohan was the hero for Dhanmondi Club during a four-wicket win over Brothers Union in Mirpur. In chase of 262 for five, Sohan struck an unbeaten 53-ball 58 to help Dhanmondi over the ropes after contributions from Yasir Ali (41) and Fazle Mahmud (55). Earlier, Brothers reached 262 for five, thanks to Mahfizul Islam's 111-ball 84.

PCB hits reset while BCB hesitates

SAMSUL AREFIN KHAN from Lahore

As the Champions Trophy edges towards its climax, with New Zealand and South Africa gearing up for a high-stakes semifinal today, Pakistan head coach Aaqib Javed perhaps felt out of place as he attended yesterday's press conference at Lahore's Gaddafi Stadium. There, Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB) announced sweeping changes to their white-ball squads. Pakistan's premature exit from the 50-over tournament -- their first ICC event on home soil in nearly three decades -- had sent shockwaves through the team's hierarchy. In response, PCB wielded the axe, stripping Babar Azam and Mohammad Rizwan of their places in the T20 squad and sidelining Shaheen Shah Afridi from the ODI setup. More significantly, Salman Ali Agha was handed the reins of the T20 side, a clear signal that Pakistan was turning the page with next year's T20 World Cup in mind. But while Javed might have preferred to be in the shoes of Mitchell Santner -- who fielded

I think they (Bangladesh) were the most experienced side after India. But they didn't perform the way they should have. This Champions Trophy is a very tough tournament. There is no second-tier team you can beat.

Pakistan head coach Aaqib Javed

pre-semifinal questions an hour earlier at the same venue -- Pakistan's fate had been sealed early. A bruising loss to New Zealand in the opener, followed by a hammer blow from India, left their final group match against Bangladesh nothing more than a dead rubber. Pakistan were not the only ones left licking their wounds. Bangladesh, too, had flattered to deceive, failing to make a mark in the competition despite arriving as aspiring champions. Yet, while Pakistan took drastic steps to shake things up, Bangladesh Cricket Board (BCB) appeared in no hurry to follow suit. Although a board meeting was held in Mirpur on Monday, no immediate decisions were made regarding their misfiring senior players, Mahmudullah Riyad and Mushfiqur Rahim -- who, according to BCB's cricket operations chairman Nazmul Abedeen Fahim, must "prove themselves" for the 2027 ODI World Cup. Asked about Bangladesh's struggles, Javed replied to travelling Bangladeshi journalists, "I think they were the most experienced side after India. But they didn't perform the way they should have." "Because this Champions Trophy is a very tough tournament. There is no second-tier team you can beat." Salman, meanwhile, was also quizzed about Bangladesh's upcoming tour of Pakistan in May, where they will play three ODIs and as many T20s. "Here we are looking forward to them. They are a great side and will always challenge you," said the new Pakistan T20 captain. With a fresh-look squad, Pakistan now turn their focus to a tour of New Zealand, featuring five T20Is and three ODIs from 16 March to 5 April. Bangladesh, on the other hand, remain at a crossroads. The question is not just whether changes are coming, but whether BCB has the appetite to make them.

Liverpool, PSG ready for blockbuster clash

AGENCIES

Arne Slot says Liverpool have nothing to fear at the Parc des Princes as he prepares his Premier League title favourites for a blockbuster last-16 first-leg Champions League clash against runaway Ligue 1 leaders Paris Saint-Germain on Wednesday. Slot's side, who finished first in the league phase with seven wins from eight games, including a 2-0 success against holders Real Madrid, take the next step in their bid for a first Champions League crown since 2019 but history is not on their side as the six-time European champions lost on both their previous visits to PSG, in 1997 and 2018.

OTHER FIXTURES	Feyenoord vs Inter	Team mentioned first will play first leg at home
	Bayern vs Leverkusen
	Benfica vs Barcelona

With 20 victories, the Reds, who are closing in on a record-equalling 20th English title, have won more league games than any team in Europe's top five leagues so far this season. "Do we fear PSG? We don't fear anybody. But I'm impressed by their quality, they are on an upward curve a bit similar to ours at the moment," he said. "I don't think the likes of Liverpool, Arsenal, Paris Saint-Germain, Barcelona, Real Madrid fear opponents. "But we definitely respect them and there's a reason for that. They won so many games in a row and they have so many quality players."

This will be just the third Champions League meeting between Liverpool and Paris Saint-Germain. They previously played each other in the 2018-19 group stage, with the Reds winning 3-2 at home and losing 2-1 away, so there is an even head-to-head record as it stands. Liverpool have not won any of their last five away games against French sides in Europe (D2 L3), with their last such victory coming at Marseille in September 2008 (2-1 in the Champions League). PSG have won their last five matches in the Champions League and hope to secure six successive wins in the competition for the first time since 1994-95. Mohamed Salah has 52 goal contributions (30 goals, 22 assists) in all competitions this term -- the most by any player in Europe's top five leagues.

Like Liverpool, PSG are marching relentlessly towards the French title, opening up a 13-point lead thanks to a 24-game unbeaten run in Ligue 1 this season. Facing Liverpool is a challenge of a different magnitude and Enrique is well aware of the threat they pose, describing the meeting of European powerhouses as an occasion more fitting for a final. "I know Liverpool very well, without a doubt they are the team in the best form in Europe both in terms of results and play," he said. "It could have been a Champions League final. We're going to try to do it with our weapons." Meanwhile, Barcelona will look for a win away from home when they visit Benfica. The contest will feature two of the most in-form strikers in the competition this season -- Barca's Robert Lewandowski (nine goals in eight matches) and Benfica's Vangelis Pavlidis (seven goals, two assists in 10 appearances). The two sides have already met in the competition this season, with nine goals being scored in an eventual 5-4 win for Barcelona. An all-Bundesliga affair will take place at the Allianz Arena on Wednesday when Bayern Munich take on Bayer Leverkusen. Leverkusen are unbeaten in their six matches against Bayern Munich across all competitions (W3 D3) under Xabi Alonso. They've kept a clean sheet in three of their last four against them, including the 0-0 in the Bundesliga in February when Bayern managed just two shots and didn't have one on target.
