

ACC to probe graft allegations against GM Quader Amu, daughter sued

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The Anti-Corruption Commission (ACC) has found preliminary evidence against Jatiyo Party Chairman GM Quader for money laundering under various names, bribery in the nomination process of the reserved women's parliamentary seats, and "position trading" within the party. ACC Director General Akhtar Hossain said as sufficient evidence has been found in a covert investigation, ACC has decided to initiate an open inquiry and take legal action.

He disclosed this information at a press briefing held at the ACC headquarters yesterday.

Akhtar Hossain said after the 2018 national elections, Tk 18.10 crore was taken as bribes for the nomination of MPs in the reserved women's seats of the JP. Allegedly, the primary beneficiary of this transaction was then acting chairman GM Quader.

In one instance, when the agreed payment was not made in full, Masuda M Rashid Chowdhury was temporarily suspended from her party position, and GM Quader's wife, Sharifa Quader, was appointed as an MP in her place.

He further stated that GM Quader fraudulently assumed the role of JP chairman and amassed a significant amount of money through 'position trading' and the nomination business, which was later laundered abroad.

Although the JP's central committee originally comprised 301 members, it currently includes around 600-650 individuals, which serves as evidence of "position trading."

Additionally, he alleged that GM Quader has laundered money under different names in Singapore, London, and Sydney, he said.

ACC has also filed three separate cases against Awami League advisory council member Amir Hossain Amu, his daughter, Sumaiya Hossain, and his sister-in-law, Syeda Haque Merry, for illegally acquiring assets worth Tk 38.39 crore, said ACC DG Akhtar.

Amu was accused of acquiring illegal wealth worth Tk 26.28 crore. Additionally, he allegedly conducted suspicious transactions worth Tk 31.48 crore in 14 bank accounts under his name.

Exploited, deceived, and finally criminalised

Nine children framed in cattle smuggling case in Cox's Bazar

MOKAMMEL SHUVO, Cox's Bazar

The future of nine impoverished children from Ramu upazila in Cox's Bazar hangs in the balance after they were wrongfully accused in a cattle smuggling case by Naikhonchhari Police in Bandarban.

While the real smugglers remain untouched, these minors, aged between 12-16, some of whom have no parents to defend them -- are being dragged through the legal system.

Their families, already struggling to survive, are now burdened with mounting legal expenses. Each household has already spent between Tk 10,000 and Tk 12,000 to secure bail for the children, and with another hearing set for March 16, they have no idea how to continue funding their legal battle.

HOW THE CHILDREN WERE TRAPPED

According to the children and their families, the events leading to their arrest began on February 26.

A local named Kalu Mia, allegedly lured them to his farm in Gorgonia with promises of payment.

He instructed them to take the cattle to the local market, giving them no indication that the cattle were smuggled. Since the area was not near the border, they had no reason to suspect anything illegal.

However, while they were on their way to the market, Naikhyangchhari police intercepted them at Bam Hatirchara Bridge and seized the cattle.

The police, too, allegedly deceived these vulnerable children. Officers told them to drive the cattle to the police station, promising Tk 3,000 and food in return.

But as soon as they arrived, the police locked them up and filed charges under the Special Powers Act, accusing them of smuggling livestock from Myanmar.

Even if the children were used by smugglers, they should never have been implicated in the case. This will leave a permanent stain on their future. Instead, the real culprits who exploit minors should be prosecuted.

ABU AHMED FAIJUL KABIR
Head of Operations
Human Rights Defender

This act of betrayal has left the children traumatised. Six of them are orphans -- five lost their fathers, and one lost both parents. With no one to shield them, they often work small jobs to help support their families. Instead of receiving protection, they are now criminalised.

Kalu Mia could not be reached for comments.

THE REAL SMUGGLERS WALK FREE

Despite the police's swift action against the children, sources confirm that the real culprit behind this smuggling operation is Jamshed Alam, a known cattle trafficker. Yet, instead of pursuing him and dismantling the smuggling network, authorities have chosen the easy route -- framing defenceless children.

Human rights activists have condemned this injustice.

Abu Ahmed Faijul Kabir, head of operations at Human Rights Defender, said, "Even if the children were used by smugglers, they should never have been implicated in the case. This will leave a permanent stain on their future. Instead, the real culprits who exploit minors should be prosecuted."

A SYSTEM THAT PUNISHES THE VULNERABLE

The repercussions of this case go far beyond legal battles.

The stigma attached to the accusations will follow these children for years, Kabir said.

They have already endured humiliating court appearances, and are living in constant fear of what comes next.

Their families, barely surviving on meagre incomes, have had to borrow money to cover legal fees. With the next hearing looming, they fear financial ruin.

Robber killed in getaway crash

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Dinaipur

A suspected robber was killed and two others injured when their truck overturned while fleeing police after a robbery in Naogaon early yesterday.

The incident occurred on the town's bypass road at Shibpur, said police.

The identity of the deceased was not known immediately. The injured Rubel Hossain and Masud Rana were undergoing treatment under police custody at Naogaon 250-Bed General Hospital.

Police said the robbery took place at a house at Enayetpur village. When the house residents raised an alarm, locals rushed to the scene, prompting the robbers to flee in a truck.

Police set up six barricades at key locations on the road. The robbers broke through all barricades while attempting to escape but ultimately lost control of their truck. Police recovered one cow and two goats from the overturned truck, believed to have been robbed, said Naogaon Sadar Model Police Station OC Nure Alam Siddique.
