Some US RMG buyers want price cuts

Many put work orders on hold

REFAYETULLAH MIRDHA

Some of the US clothing and footwear retailers and brands are demanding a big discount from Bangladeshi suppliers, and are putting the work orders on hold to adjust the new reciprocal tariff measures, exporters said.

In some cases, the buyers are demanding a 10 percent discount from local suppliers on the ready-to-ship goods and are asking the local manufacturers to delay the process of making garments.

The local suppliers are now trying to negotiate prices of garments under the new tariff regime. However, not all the US buyers are demanding the price cuts as many are trying to wait and see.

The suppliers and the brands are doing their homework. For instance, a US buyer in Bangladesh has sought a 10 percent discount on the ready-to-ship goods and suggested bearing 3.3 percent discounts by suppliers, 3.3 percent by fabric suppliers, and 3.3 percent by retailers, said an exporter, wishing not to be named.

It is true that some of the US buyers are demanding discounts from the local suppliers, said Rubana Huq, former president of Bangladesh Garment Manufacturers and Exporters Association (BGMEA). She, however, declined to mention the names of retailers and brands.

Back down or face 50% added tariffs Trump threatens China

AFP, Washington

US President Donald Trump yesterday threatened to impose an additional 50% tariffs on US imports from China, ratcheting up a trade war even as a dramatic sell-off in global markets gathered pace.

Trump upended the world economy last week with sweeping tariffs that have raised fears of an international recession and triggered criticism even from within his own Republican Party.

In response to Trump's tariffs, Beijing – Washington's major economic rival – unveiled its own 34 percent duties on US goods to come into effect on Thursday.

The US president yesterday chastised China for not heeding "my warning for abusing countries not to retaliate."

He said on social media that if China did not immediately back down, "the United States will impose ADDITIONAL Tariffs on China of 50 percent, effective April 9th."

With the incoming 34 percent rate and new 50 percent threat, the total additional tariffs this year could hit 104 percent, the White House told AFP.

Stock markets and oil prices collapsed further as trading floors across the world were overcome by waves of selling after last week's sharp losses.

Wall Street was wracked by volatility, bouncing into positive territory on hopes of a 90-day pause in tariffs, only to sink lower when those were dashed by the White House.

Hong Kong collapsed by 13.2 percent Monday, its worst day in nearly three decades.

Trillions of dollars have been wiped off combined stock market valuations in recent sessions.

37 more Gazans killed in Israeli strikes

Journalist among the dead; France opposes any displacement, annexation in Gaza, West Bank

AGENCIES

At least 37 people, including a journalist, were killed by Israeli strikes on Gaza yesterday as French President Emmanuel Macron said that he strongly opposes any displacement of Palestinians or annexation in Gaza and the Israeli occupied West Bank.

Twenty-two of those killed were in the central and southern regions of the Strip, the sources said. At least 44 Palestinians were killed on Sunday.

In Khan Yunis, an Israeli air strike hit a tent used by local media, killing two, including a Palestinian journalist, and wounding nine others.

Footage showed people trying to douse flames in the tent inside the compound of the Nasser Hospital during the early hours of yesterday.

Images appearing to show a journalist in flames and another person trying to rescue him were widely shared.

The Israeli military said in a statement it struck Hassan Aslih, whom they described as a "terrorist, who operates under the guise of a journalist" and a member of Hamas' Khan Younis Brigade.

Aslih, a well-known Palestinian journalist in Gaza, with hundreds of thousands of followers on social media platforms, was critically wounded in the strike, medics said.

Ismail al-Thawabta, director of the Hamas-run Gaza government media office, said Israel's accusations against Aslih were "false", adding that Aslih had no political affiliation.

A second Palestinian was also killed in the attack, Gaza medics said.

Faqawi's death raised the number of journalists killed by Israel's campaign in Gaza to more than 210 since October 2023, according to the Palestinian Journalists Syndicate.

In the occupied West Bank, Israeli forces yesterday shot and killed a Palestinian-American boy.

An Israeli strike on southern Lebanon killed one person yesterday, according to the health ministry, with Israel's military saying it had "eliminated" a Hezbollah commander in the latest raid despite a truce.

The Lebanese health ministry said in a statement that an "Israeli enemy" strike on the town of Taybeh, near the border, "led to the death of one citizen".

Lebanon's official National News Agency (NNA) said the strike hit "in front of a motorcycle repair shop" in the town, in south Lebanon's Marjayoun district.

A group of masked robbers looted valuables from four flats in a building at Green Model Town Society in the capital's Mugda area early yesterday.

The gang also hurt four residents.

The robbery took place between 3:00am and 4:00am at a building on Road-3 in D-block, said Sajedur Rahman, officer-in-charge of Mugda Police Station.
