

Transforming Together for a Sustainable Future

30 years! A relentless pursuit of excellence by the bank, for the country, and for its people, building a sustainable tomorrow.

Through this journey, we've grown into a dynamic financial institution that champions innovation, accessibility and sustainability. Driven by the hard work and adaptability of our people, we've contributed in shaping Bangladesh into a resilient economy, fueling progress and prosperity.

Now, backed by the trust of millions and decades of renewed expertise, we stand ready to embrace the future – stronger than ever.

MESSAGE FROM

THE CHAIRMAN OF PRIME BANK

“Over the last 30 years, we have remained steadfast in our commitment to transparency, ethical banking, and innovation.”

On the auspicious occasion of Prime Bank's 30th anniversary, I would like to extend my heartfelt gratitude to each of you on behalf of the Board of Directors. This milestone is not only a celebration of our journey, but a sincere tribute to your unwavering trust, loyalty, and continued partnership with us over the past three decades.

When Prime Bank was established in 1995, our goal was simple yet ambitious: to provide reliable, people-focused, and fully compliant banking services that would contribute meaningfully to the economic growth and well-being of our nation. We envisioned a bank that could support individuals, empower businesses, and serve as a partner in the progress of Bangladesh. Thanks to your confidence in us, that vision has taken root and flourished.

Over the last 30 years, we have remained steadfast in our commitment to transparency, ethical banking, and innovation. We have always placed the interests of our customers at the core of our mission, and we've worked tirelessly to ensure that the services we provide are not only efficient and secure but also aligned with national and global compliance standards.

Whether through personal banking, SME support, or corporate financing, we have aimed to make banking accessible, responsible, and impactful.

Our journey, however, is far from over. We are in a time of transformation—driven by technology, shaped by global trends, and guided by the evolving needs of our customers. Prime Bank has embraced this transformation wholeheartedly. From digitizing our services and launching mobile-first solutions to introducing AI-driven risk management tools and sustainable financing options, we are redefining what modern banking means in Bangladesh. As Chairman, I take great pride in the bank's performance and resilience over the years. We have navigated financial shifts, global disruptions, and regulatory evolutions with strength and stability. None of this would have been possible without your support, which motivates us to constantly perform better and lead with purpose.

Prime Bank was founded for the people of Bangladesh. Every decision we make and every service we launch is centered on the idea that banking should empower lives and build futures. We believe that our growth is only meaningful when it uplifts communities, promotes financial inclusion, and drives sustainable development in our country. This belief continues to shape our strategies, operations, and aspirations for the next 30 years and beyond.

Thank you once again for your invaluable trust, your loyalty, and your journey with us. As we mark this 30-year milestone, know that we look to the future with optimism, ambition, and an unrelenting commitment to serve you even better. You are not just customers; you are the foundation upon which Prime Bank stands.

With deepest gratitude,

Tanjil Chowdhury
Chairman,
Prime Bank PLC.

Thank You!

CUSTOMERS, PARTNERS & STAKEHOLDERS

“Over the past few years, we have entered a new chapter of transformation. Banking is evolving rapidly, and Prime Bank has responded with bold steps to redefine modern banking in Bangladesh.”

As Prime Bank celebrates 30 years of service to the people of Bangladesh, I want to take a moment—on behalf of our entire leadership team and dedicated staff—to say thank you. This incredible milestone belongs to you as much as it does to us. Your trust, loyalty, and feedback have shaped our growth, inspired our transformation, and fueled our pursuit of excellence in every corner of the bank.

Three decades ago, Prime Bank began its journey with a strong commitment: to offer the highest standards of banking—built on integrity, innovation, and inclusion. Our goal has always been to serve not only as a financial institution, but as a catalyst for progress. Whether helping individuals achieve their personal financial goals, supporting entrepreneurs and SMEs, or financing large-scale national development projects, we have consistently worked to be a bank for the people.

At the heart of our journey has been an unwavering focus on compliant, ethical, and forward-thinking banking. We take pride in maintaining rigorous governance and operational standards that build confidence in everything we do. More than just providing financial services, we've strived to foster relationships—relationships based on trust, transparency, and a genuine understanding of your needs.

We are leveraging digital innovation to bring convenience and speed to your fingertips, investing in sustainability to protect our shared future, and enhancing our internal performance metrics to create greater value for our stakeholders. Our mobile banking, internet platforms, agent banking networks, and SME-focused solutions are all designed with one clear purpose: to serve you better, faster, and more efficiently.

I am incredibly proud of how our teams have responded to this call for transformation. But more importantly, I am inspired by how you—our customers—have embraced these changes, encouraged us, and journeyed with us through every milestone. Your feedback, your loyalty, and your expectations have challenged us to raise our standards and perform at our best.

Looking ahead, we are more determined than ever to uphold our legacy of excellence while embracing a future defined by innovation and inclusion. Prime Bank was built for Bangladesh—for its people and for its future. As we continue this journey, we renew our promise to be a driving force in the development of our country. We will continue to support businesses, empower youth and women, invest in green solutions, and contribute to the financial ecosystem in ways that are sustainable, responsible, and inclusive.

Thank you for being a part of our story. Thank you for placing your trust in us. Here's to 30 years of shared success—and to many more as we grow, transform, and redefine the future of banking together.

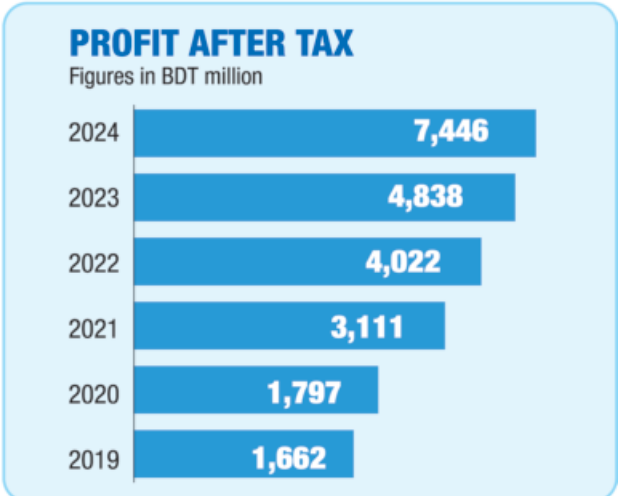

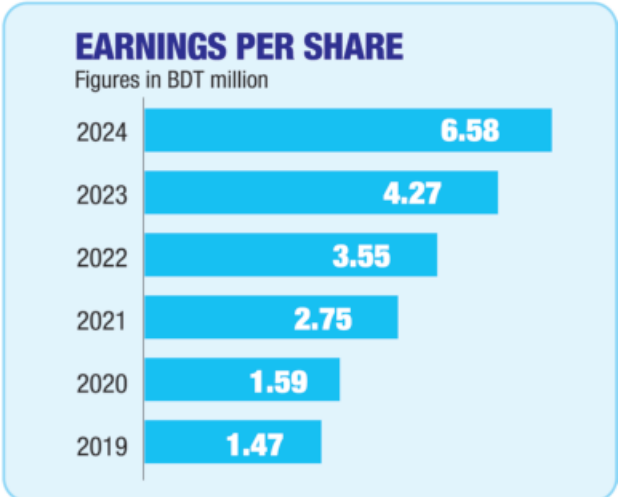

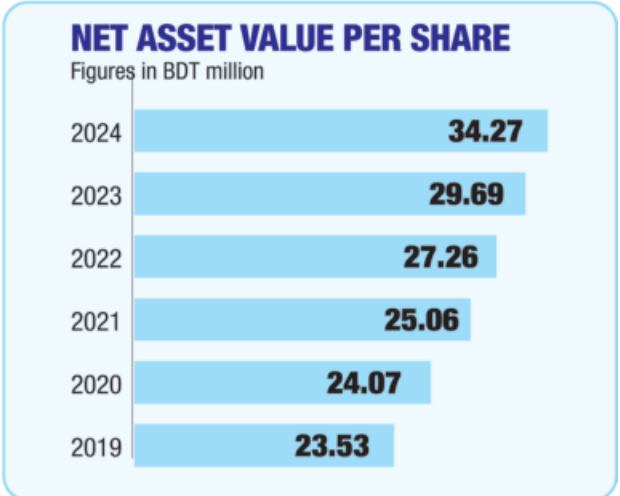

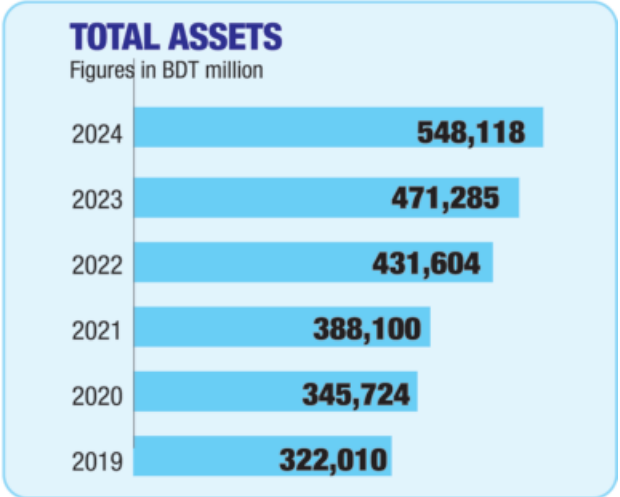

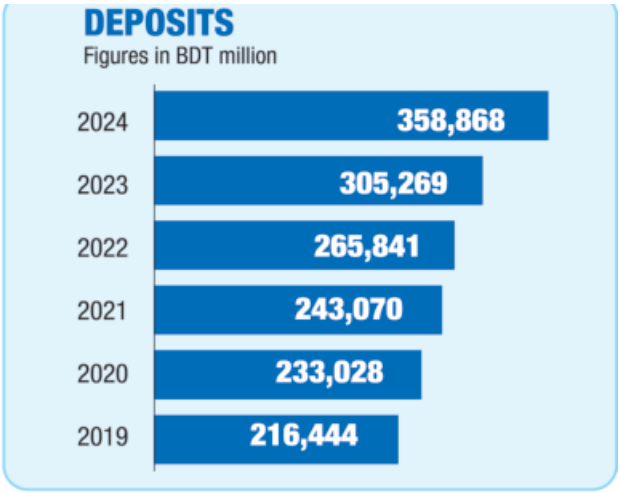

With sincere appreciation,

Hassan O. Rashid
Chief Executive Officer,
Prime Bank PLC.

A few words of inspiration from some of our valued customers

Prime Bank taught me how to bank

Tahmina Akter Mou, Founder, Ilma Dairy Farm

I have been a proud customer of Prime Bank since May 1, 2023, when I opened an account for my venture, Ilma Dairy Farm. From the very beginning, my experience with Prime Bank has been truly remarkable. Joining hands with the bank has been an opportunity to learn, grow, and understand the world of banking more deeply. What I appreciate the most is the commitment of Prime Bank's officials. They keep their word and consistently deliver on their promises. Their dedication to ensuring the best possible service for customers, with speed and professionalism, truly stands out. We have complete trust and confidence in Prime Bank—something that has allowed us to work closely and confidently with them.

I had no prior knowledge of banking, and it was through Prime Bank that I learned how banking works. I hope to receive continued support in the days to come as I pursue my aspirations. To fellow customers, I encourage you to share your feedback with the bank, treat the staff with respect, and spread the word about the services you enjoy—so that others can also benefit from Prime Bank's dedicated support.

Prime Bank has always stood by my business needs

Md. Rezaul Haque Rezu, Proprietor, Haque Bread & Food Products

I used to take services from another bank, but a few Relationship Managers from Prime Bank—whom I knew personally—encouraged me to start banking with Prime. That's how my journey with Prime Bank began. Since then, they have consistently stood beside me like a trusted partner. Whether it is handling transactions or accessing services, I have always been highly satisfied with Prime Bank. In times of urgent need, their timely support has truly been unforgettable. What I appreciate most is their strong commitment to customers. The prompt service I receive whenever I have a need is commendable. Recently, when I needed funds to expand my business but could not manage it elsewhere, I reached out to Prime Bank. They immediately arranged the required amount, which played a crucial role in my business growth. That's why Prime Bank is a name I deeply trust and rely on—a place where I know I can always find the banking support I need, whenever I need it.

Seeing women in leadership roles at Prime Bank is truly encouraging

Halida Hanum Akhter, Chairperson and Founder, Health Promotion Links

When I was serving as the Director of an autonomous reproductive health research and training institute, one of our statisticians later joined Prime Bank. In 2002, after leaving that organisation to pursue my own entrepreneurial journey, I was in search of a reliable bank to place some institutional grants as fixed deposits. I reached out to my former colleague, and in 2003, opened my first Fixed Deposit account with Prime Bank. That marked the beginning of my journey with the bank. Since then, my experience with Prime Bank has been nothing short of excellent. Whenever I needed assistance, they responded promptly—either by sending someone from the bank or by ensuring swift and efficient service during my visits. I truly appreciate the professionalism, warmth, and efficiency of the bank's staff. As a woman working in women's health, it's inspiring to see women leading in senior positions at Prime Bank. I strongly believe more women should join this bank, and I wholeheartedly support the cause of women's empowerment. On the 30th anniversary of Prime Bank's remarkable journey, I feel honored to be part of it as a customer. I encourage fellow customers to support this journey with pride and contribute to the nation's economic progress through banking with Prime Bank. I wish the bank continued success and a glorious future ahead.

Still banking with Prime Bank after all these years

S M Sayeduzzaman, Former Banker

As far as I can remember, it was around 1997-98. At the time, I was serving as a Senior Principal Officer at Bangladesh Krishi Bank. One day, an officer from the Islamic banking branch of Prime Bank requested me to open a savings account. At his request, I opened a Mudaraba savings account. That was my very first account with a private bank. If that gentleman had not personally come to my office and made the request, I probably would not have opened an account with a private bank at all. At that time, government banks were considered the banks for ordinary people, and private banks were seen as banks for the wealthy. Later, although I opened accounts with several other private banks as needed, I eventually had to close them. But the account with Prime Bank is still active. Like a first love, since it was my first private bank account, I never felt like closing it. I have always found the officers and staff at Prime Bank's Dilkusha Islamic Branch to be helpful, and I have never been dissatisfied with their behavior. In fact, whenever I faced any issue at other branches, the Dilkusha Islamic Branch promptly resolved it for me. On the occasion of Prime Bank's 30th anniversary, I wish the bank continued success and extend my heartfelt congratulations and thanks—on behalf of all customers—to all the officers and staff of the bank, including those at the Dilkusha Islamic Banking Branch.

Prompt Service and Peace of Mind That's Why I Choose Prime Bank

Dr. Ainun Nishat, Professor Emeritus, BRAC University

I am a regular customer of Prime Bank. I take the bank's services to deposit money and withdraw when needed. Whenever I have some savings, I try to keep them as fixed deposits at Prime Bank. I also avail services including bill payments and issuing pay orders. As a customer, a few things are very important to me—a sense of security and peace of mind. Many banks in Dhaka hesitate or even fail to provide cash for slightly large cheques. But I've never faced such issues with Prime Bank. Whenever I needed money, they provided it without hesitation. In fact, they even asked which denominations I would prefer. This feeling of comfort and security comes from the bank's management and policy level decisions. Their professionalism and behavior assure me that keeping my money in Prime Bank is safe. Moreover, while other banks often keep customers waiting for hours after depositing a cheque, I have never faced that at Prime Bank. Even during busy hours, they somehow ensure the cheque is processed quickly. The same goes for depositing money or collecting documents—they act promptly. As most of the transactions are done through debit and credit cards, it is essential that banks have enough service points. Prime Bank has sufficient service points to meet customers' needs. Customers remember how they are treated. No matter how busy the branch is or how much workload there is, the senior and junior officers at Prime Bank have always spoken with a smile. Even at the last minute, I have received proper service. I am fully satisfied with the way they serve their customers.

I am highly satisfied with Prime Bank's efficient customer service

Zeeshan Hasib, Financial consultant and Ex Banker

Prime Bank, is one of the leading private commercial bank in Bangladesh. I have been banking with Prime Bank for a while now and I am highly satisfied with their efficient customer service, user friendly mobile app and its credit/debit card propositions that offers great rewards. On its anniversary I wish Prime Bank, its staff, customers and shareholders the very best.

I am satisfied with Prime Bank's service as a customer

Manzuma Murshed, Managing Partner, Mentors' Chittagong

I am truly happy that Prime Bank is celebrating 30 years of its journey. My experience with this bank has been truly excellent. Their customer service, in particular, is exceptional. The entire team at the Chattogram branch does an outstanding job for us. Whenever I have required assistance or support, I have received it from them within a short time. We are working to develop entrepreneurs across various sectors. We always encourage them to save money. I needed some ideas about different schemes, especially DPS (Deposit Pension Scheme), for them. At that time, I contacted Prime Bank's Chattogram branch, and they promptly provided me with the necessary information. This later helped us in selecting suitable DPS schemes for our entrepreneurs. For that, I extend my special thanks to the management of Prime Bank. Best wishes to Prime Bank on its 30th anniversary. As a satisfied customer, I look forward to moving ahead together with Prime Bank in the future.

I appreciate the commitment shown by the bank towards its customers

Meherun N. Islam, Group President & Managing Director, CEMS-Global, USA & Asia-Pacific

I decided to begin my journey with Prime Bank after watching an interview with Mr. Azam J Chowdhury. His words reflected a strong professional commitment. The employees are the true assets of Prime Bank. I am very satisfied with the communication and interactions I have had with the bank staff. What I appreciate the most is the commitment shown by the bank and its officials toward their customers—and the way they follow through on that commitment. When a customer receives the service they expect from a bank, it means the bank's service is functioning properly. In essence, most banks offer similar services. Therefore, achieving customer satisfaction through service is a bank's greatest accomplishment. It's important to remember that the money deposited in the bank belongs to customers. You conduct business with that money. We hope you will keep our money safe and ensure our services are delivered with respect. Additionally, all customers should be treated with due dignity. Please keep in mind—this is money entrusted to you by the people. You are doing business with other people's money. Keep us secure and give us the proper service as a sign of respect. Big and small, all kinds of customers should get proper respect. We also have to understand that the bank is doing business with our money and maintaining all of their needs with the profit. We should not do anything irregular that would cause issues for both the bank and us. It can be anything. Our activities will ultimately hurt our country's economy. We should not use banks or bankers for our own benefit wrongly. In the same way, bankers should not prefer any single customer unfairly and hurt other customers—and, at the end of the day, their own institution.

Prime Bank's hospitality and personalised service is unmatched

Shanaz Khaleque, Ex Senior Teacher- Maple leaf International School

Back in 2011, there were very few banks that felt relevant, so I opted to open an account with Prime Bank. However, I did not use my account for a long time. In the past two years, the whole scenario of the bank has changed, and I have come to love it and started banking with Prime Bank regularly. Overall, I have had a very delightful experience with the bank. Due to my good experience, I encouraged my whole family to bank with the same institution, and now my daughters and son-in-law are all clients of the bank. What I love most about the bank is their hospitality. I do my banking at the Dhanmondi branch; it feels at home whenever I go there, as they know me and treat me on a personal level. They remember my birthday, my anniversary, and on every occasion, I receive personal greetings from the staff of the bank. I also love the Prime Bank app. Personally, I am not very tech-savvy, but even for me the app is quite helpful and easy to use. I would definitely say I feel secure with the money I have in Prime Bank, because the bank staff have always been transparent about the rates and other details. They never over-commit just to keep the numbers looking good, like some other banks. I would definitely recommend Prime Bank to anyone I know, with my full gratitude and confidence. They are vigilant, helpful, and definitely trustworthy with anyone's hard-earned money.

From gen Z to 80+, Prime's service is relevant for all age groups

Tonima Sultana, Fashion Designer at Red Bedroom Fashion House

My journey with Prime Bank started in 2019 during the Covid pandemic. I learned about the bank from one of my close friends who recommended me with conviction when I asked her about which bank to go to. So far, I have had a very good experience with the bank. I have recently introduced my spouse and son to the Dhanmondi branch as clients. What I like most about the bank is that the bank seems very relevant to all age groups. My mother, who is 80 plus, is very happy with her banking experience. My son, who is Gen Z, only banks with Prime Bank. My spouse and I are millennials and we are also happy with our experience. So I really love this about the branch that I go to—they understand and deliver as per the customer's needs and preferences. I can certainly assert that I had a very secure banking experience with Prime. I do not think twice before investing with Prime Bank, as I know that the staff at my branch will definitely suggest me whichever product is best suited for me. I am a proud client of Prime Bank and I will definitely tell everyone to go to Prime Bank and enjoy seamless banking.

ELECTION ROADMAP

BNP unhappy as Yunus gives no specific timeline

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The election must be held by December, as any delay could cause the situation to spiral out of control, the BNP said after a meeting with the chief adviser yesterday.

The BNP said it was dissatisfied because Chief Adviser Muhammad Yunus did not say specifically when the election will be held.

"The honourable chief adviser did not give us a specific deadline.... He said he wanted the election to be held between [this] December and June [2026]," BNP Secretary General Mirza Fakhrul Islam Alamgir told reporters in front of state guest house Jamuna, the CA's official residence.

Fakhrul and BNP standing committee members Jamir Uddin Sircar, Mirza Abbas, Nazrul Islam Khan, Amir Khasru Mahmud Chowdhury, Salahuddin Ahmed, and Iqbal Hasan Mahmud Tuku attended the nearly two-hour long meeting.

"We are not satisfied at all. We clearly said that unless there is an election by December, the political, economic, and social conditions of the country will worsen further," Fakhrul said.

Advisers Salehuddin Ahmed, Wahiduddin Mahmud, Adilur Rahman Khan, and Asif Nazrul also attended the meeting.

Students at different polytechnic institutes block a street in Tejgaon's Satrasta area in the capital around noon yesterday, halting traffic movement and causing citywide gridlocks. They demonstrated as part of their countrywide programme to realise their demands, including cancellation of a High Court verdict on the promotion of craft instructors to junior instructors. They called a railway blockade for today. Story on page 3.

"To me, they seemed content. When our meeting ended, I thought they had received answers to many of the questions on their minds. That's how I felt. Fakhrul Bhai might have felt differently."

Law Adviser Asif Nazrul

Asif talked to reporters minutes after Fakhrul's briefing ended. Between this December and June next year, the law adviser said, the election would be held as early as possible.

Fakhrul said the BNP demanded a specific roadmap to the election. "In the given political situation and the state of the country, we believe the solution will come from a fair election," he said.

Fakhrul said his party leaders would discuss among themselves and with ally parties to decide the next course of action.

Asked whether he thought the government was trying to extend its stay in power, Fakhrul said the chief adviser "did not rule out [election in] December. But leaves the window open until June. However, we have made it clear that December is our cut-off time".

The BNP leaders pointed out at the meeting that the next Ramadan will be in February, and then there will be the SSC and HSC exams – each of which takes a month or longer. By the exams end, it will be monsoon and elections may seem impractical, said sources present at the meeting.

In response, the CA said he would keep these factors in mind.

At the meeting, Fakhrul submitted a four-page letter to the CA, outlining what immediate actions the government must take.

The letter mentioned the responsibility of national identity cards should lie with the Election Commission and urged the CA to promptly resolve the legal complexities over redrawing the boundaries of constituencies.

Polls timing tops parties' talks with US officials

BNP wants it by Dec, Jamaat before Ramadan, NCP after structural reforms

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The BNP has told a visiting US delegation that it wants the national election to be held by December as it believes issues related to reforms can be settled within the next one month.

The newly-formed National Citizen Party (NCP) said it wants the polls only after fundamental structural reforms to the state.

The NCP also alleged the local authorities are working in favour of the BNP in many areas while NCP leaders are facing attacks. Therefore, holding an election under such an administration is not possible.

The Jamaat-e-Islami conveyed its position that the election should be held before Ramadan next year, arguing that polls after that period could be uncertain because of the rainy season.

The three political parties shared their views in three separate meetings with the US delegation led by Nicole Chulick, deputy assistant secretary of state at the Bureau of South and Central Asian Affairs, at the residence of the US deputy head of mission in the capital yesterday.

Chulick arrived in Dhaka on Tuesday, while Andrew R Herrup, deputy assistant secretary at the Bureau of East Asian and Pacific Affairs, arrived yesterday. US Chargé d'Affaires to Myanmar Susan Stevenson will accompany Herrup during his visit to Bangladesh.

Today, the US delegation is scheduled to meet Chief Adviser Prof Muhammad Yunus, National Security Adviser Dr Khalilur Rahman and Foreign Adviser Touhid Hossain.

This is the first official-level visit by the US after President Donald Trump assumed office.

Roadmap for election by July

EC says it is working with election in Dec in mind

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The Election Commission (EC) is likely to announce its roadmap for the 13th national election by July in line with the timeline announced by the interim government.

Discussions on the next election with the registered political parties will take place in August–September or earlier, if possible, said Election Commissioner Anwarul Islam Sarkar yesterday at a media briefing.

Since taking office, the current EC has been working according to its own action plan, he said, adding that, as part of this plan, they have been updating the voter list.

The EC hopes to complete the delimitation of parliamentary constituencies within three months provided the government decides regarding amendments to the relevant law.

Preliminary preparatory work will be mostly completed within the next three months, he said.

Asked whether preparations are being made assuming the polls will be held in December, Sarkar said that they are proceeding according to the government-declared timeline, which is December.

"We are moving forward based on the repeatedly announced timeline by the government," he said.

Regarding new party registration, Sarkar said three parties have applied for registration so far and many others have sought an extension of the deadline.

The current application deadline is April 20.

When asked whether there would be changes to the law regarding the registration of political parties, he said they

Novoair may be grounded from May

RASHIDUL HASAN

Novoair is likely to shut down its operation for around three months from May as the private airline has started the process of selling the five ATR aircraft in its fleet.

The process is likely to be completed this month, said Md Mofizur Rahman, managing director of Novoair.

Novoair is hopeful of getting a new investor on board soon, he said, adding that discussions are at the final stage.

"If we get the new investor, we will not sell our aircraft to foreign buyers. In that case, our flights will not shut down. Otherwise, we will have to discontinue the flight operations for three months."

The airline's staff and officials will get their salaries as normal in those three months.

Since its inception on January 9, 2013, Novoair has invested more than $50 million in aircraft acquisition and an additional $10 million in infrastructure and support equipment.

Except for its 2018-2019 financial year, the airline has incurred losses every year.

The pandemic caused significant losses to the airline and the ongoing price escalations due to the Ukraine war have continued to affect profitability, Rahman said.

Additionally, the shrinking domestic market and reduced demand have compounded the challenges.

Despite plans to expand its fleet and international network, Novoair has been unable to do so due to a global shortage of aircraft available for lease and due to competition from larger airlines.

KROMOSHO EXHIBITION

Where past and present collide

RBR

An artistic mind finds inspiration even in the mundane details of life. It makes the ordinary extraordinary. The smell of frying omelettes, the stirring sound of the spoon in a teacup, the sight of a mother oiling her daughter's hair, or an old man reading a newspaper – any of these can spark a fancy in their mind.

All these dull routines of our everyday life, and these intangible fleeting sights and sounds excite an artist, making them want to freeze these moments of magic realism in their art.

Photography is such a visual art form, that frames such creative expressions and ideations through images a photographer takes. And renowned Bangladeshi photographer Munem Wasif is one such artist, who can sniff out an artsy story in the actual moment.

The curator and educator will hold his solo exhibition, after a long hiatus since 2009, titled "Kromosho", loosely translated to "progressively or gradually changing".

The exhibition commences on April 18 at 6:00pm, at Bengal Shilpalay. "Kromosho" exhibits the artist's two decades of work on Puran Dhaka in three phases of timespan – titled "Stereo, Kheyal, and Bare: encircling the past, present, and on to the imagined future".

"Gradually, these timelines cross each other's boundaries. The body of my work has a personal vocabulary and the history and atmosphere of old Dhaka that has always fascinated me. The place has been my muse for the longest time. The moments I have captured are given the colour of my imagination; from intimate memories of my childhood, my relationships, and the ether I grew up in. My imagination is more complex than the ordinary because I found streaks of semblance in these flashes from my real-life events," says Munem Wasif.

Wasif has documented multiple layers of time and recorded the exponential growth of old town communities, embracing urbanity through photography, film, and various other media. He celebrated their living without prejudice, and a sense of adapting, which is in constant transformation and is fluid.

"STEREO (2001-2022)" shows the city's casual comfort in dwelling both in the past and present; a refrigerator, LED lights, digital watch, or baking bakarkhanis in a custom-made oven, shunning the old clay tandoor, to depict how Old Dhaka morphed with time, embracing urbanity yet retaining its core of being chaotic, dramatic, and forever evolving.

"I revisited the places I photographed to witness the changes it went through. There, I again captured the newness and adaptability to changes over time to make a comparison. The deliberate juxtaposition of the latest photographs in the exhibition alongside the earlier black and white works, allows the audience to understand the hybridised realities of Puran Dhaka, and one is left in a space with a complex impression of contemporary life," explains Wasif.

"KHEYAL (2015-2018)" is primarily fiction or imagination capturing the enigma that is this historic city. Living amid the grandeur of neglected Mughal architecture are dynamic social groups and spontaneous neighbourhoods that inhabit spaces around courtyards, narrow lanes, and bustling bazaars; and the fine line between private and public space is faded.

"I would describe the content as characters who are lost in certain mental states and are found in other magical situations," comments Wasif.

"Shammano", or bare assemblage, is the final part of the exhibition. Here, Wasif reveals how the colour palettes of the chaos surrounding the city, or discarded objects and material triggered the urge to experiment and create something for him.

"Pieces of discarded wood, metal wires, and parts of furniture were given a new lease of life and purpose in my studio. I enjoyed rediscovering something new in the old, placing them in unexpected configurations, embracing the idea of chance in the process," notes Wasif.

A skateboard from broken pieces of cracked wood and, the broken legs of a chair were visualised as a third eye. "You need to have an eye to see and recalibrate the old," he adds.

To Wasif, his career has matured and aged along with this city. From film to digital photography, Wasif's relationship with Old Dhaka gradually deepened.

Photographs are not just realistic document of what is happening around you. It can very well be a poem that allows you to imagine the abstract moment – and that in itself is powerful.

Pakistan foreign secy in Dhaka

DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENT

Pakistan Foreign Secretary Amna Baloch arrived in Dhaka yesterday on a two-day visit to attend the Foreign Office Consultation (FOC), the first such diplomatic engagement in 15 years, as Dhaka and Islamabad seek to normalise relations.

Foreign Secretary Jashim Uddin will lead the Bangladesh side and Amna Baloch will lead the Pakistan side at the FOC to be held at the State Guest House Padma today.

After the FOC, Amna Baloch will also call on Chief Adviser Muhammad Yunus and Foreign Adviser Tuhid Hossain. She will also attend an interaction with the think-tanks and Pakistani diaspora in Dhaka in the evening.

The FOC is being held ahead of Pakistan's Deputy Prime Minister Ishaq Dar's visit to Bangladesh, expected on April 27–28.

Relations between the countries have been warming since the fall of the Awami League-led government on August 5 last year.

Bangladesh's future rests on its people

Says US state dept

DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENT

The US State Department has reiterated that the future of Bangladesh will ultimately be determined by its people.

State Department Spokesperson Tammy Bruce made the statement during a press briefing in Washington on Tuesday, responding to a question about rising concerns over extremism and political unrest in the country.

A journalist asked for the US government's stance on reports of growing "Islamist extremism" under the Prof Yunus-led government in Bangladesh, with protesters allegedly displaying images of Osama bin Laden and targeting American brands such as KFC and Coca-Cola with antisemitic rhetoric.

Bruce acknowledged that Bangladesh is facing several internal challenges but declined to comment on specific issues.

She noted that the United States has previously engaged with Bangladesh on these matters.

"All of these, including what you're discussing – protests, et cetera – are ultimately for the Bangladeshi authorities to handle," she said, adding that continued dialogue with Dhaka remains important.

"Democracy matters, and actions by people matter to confront issues that might, as we've seen over the last 20, 25 years, destroy their lives. It's pretty clear what the choices are for many nations on this planet," she added.

"Ultimately, the future of Bangladesh is going to be decided by the Bangladeshi people."

that reforms endorsed by all political parties would be implemented.

"The remaining issues will be brought before the people during the election. Based on the public mandate, parties will enter the next parliament with their respective agendas. After that, no unresolved matters will remain. The Election Commission is prepared and has stated there are no further obstacles. So, the election can take place before December," Khasru said.

He told the US diplomat that without the restoration of democratic order, many decisions—both domestic and international—would remain stalled, impacting key stakeholders.

"Once an elected government is in place, decision-making becomes easier, especially with public support. It's not just about immediate actions—those considering investments, both local and foreign, are evaluating short-, mid-, and long-term prospects. This is not a short-term issue," he added.

Khasru said the US-Bangladesh relationship was the primary topic of the discussion during the meeting.

They also discussed the BNP's policy and its future economic plans as the US delegation was interested in these matters.

"Issues like the economy and tariffs came up, and Bangladesh's position regarding tariffs was also discussed. We said that Bangladesh wants to sit together and collectively address the tariff issue," he said.

He added that the matter needed to be addressed because if the tariff is not brought within a tolerable limit, the country's exports will be at stake.

BNP Secretary General Mirza Fakhrul Islam Alamgir and Organising Secretary Shama Obaid also attended the meeting.

After their meeting with the US delegation, NCP Convener Nahid Islam told reporters the field-level administration does not appear to be working impartially and that NCP leaders and activists are coming under attack in different parts of the country.

"The administration is playing a silent role in the incidents of extortion in rural areas. We told them [the US delegation] that if such an administration remains in place, it is not possible to hold elections under it. For a level playing field, a neutral administration, bureaucracy, and police must be ensured," added the NCP convener.

NCP Member Secretary Akhter Hossen, Senior Joint Convener Samanta Shermeen and Senior Joint Member Secretary Tasnim Jara were present during the meeting.

Nahid said they also discussed their reform proposals. The party mentioned its three key demands – reform, justice, and the election of a national assembly.

He said the NCP is not advocating for minimal reforms, but fundamental structural reforms of the state, without which, he said, no election would be acceptable. "Whether the National Citizen Party will participate in such an election would also remain under consideration," he added.

Jamaat Ameer Shafiqur Rahman,

meanwhile, said they informed the US delegation that they wanted elections to be held before next Ramadan.

"If we wait till June, the monsoon season will begin with probabilities of cyclones and flooding, which could make the election uncertain. That is why we believe it must be held before Ramadan," he told reporters.

He said that the US delegation wanted to know about the current political situation in Bangladesh and asked when and how the upcoming election will be held.

"We told them that the chief advisor said the election will be held by December this year or June next year. We want to see if he sticks to his commitment," added the Jamaat chief.

Shafiqur also said they had an open discussion and touched upon the issues of how their economic policy and foreign relations would be if the party was elected.

The US delegation also wanted to know the Jamaat's views on various regional matters and raised the issues of rights of the minorities, women and labour.

"We requested the US delegation to reconsider the 37 percent tariff, as our country is currently at a critical juncture, going through a crucial time. We requested that they relay our concerns," Shafiqur said.

The US delegation stated their commitment to democratic norms, he said. "We said we exercise democracy in the party and are committed to the same at the national level."

He said the US delegation also held a meeting with the vice chancellors of the public and private universities.

Jamaat Secretary General Mia Golam Parwar accompanied Shafiqur at the meeting.

Yunus among 100 most influential people

Claudia Sheinbaum, Venezuela's Maria Corina Machado, South Korea's Lee Jae-myung, and Robert F Kennedy Jr, among other leaders, entrepreneurs, and entertainers.

In a tribute published in Time, former US secretary of state Hillary Rodham Clinton praised the Nobel Peace Prize laureate for stepping into leadership during a critical juncture in the nation's history.

"After a student-led uprising toppled Bangladesh's authoritarian prime minister last year, a known leader stepped up to guide the nation toward democracy: Nobel Peace Prize laureate Muhammad Yunus," Clinton writes.

Highlighting Yunus' legacy, Hillary recalled his work in founding Grameen Bank, which revolutionised microfinance by extending small loans to impoverished communities – 97 percent of them women – enabling millions to start businesses, support their families, and reclaim their dignity.

"I first met Yunus when he travelled to Arkansas to help then-governor Bill Clinton and me set up similar programs in the US," she said.

"Since then, wherever I've travelled in the world, I have witnessed the extraordinary impact of his work – lives transformed, communities lifted, and hope reborn."

Hillary noted that Yunus has once again responded to his country's call by leading the post-uprising transitional government as chief adviser.

"As he shepherds Bangladesh out of the shadows of oppression, he is restoring human rights, demanding accountability, and laying the foundations for a just and free society," she added.

BNP unhappy as Yunus gives no specific timeline

"We have supported you and would like to have faith in you," the letter reads.

The BNP believes a free and fair national election can be held by December after reforming laws, rules, and provisions, and making changes to the relevant institutions.

"We reaffirm our decision to continue supporting all good initiatives undertaken by your government. We urge... quick announcement of a roadmap to the national parliamentary election by December," reads the letter.

Those who frequently talk about reforms often attempt to label the BNP as an anti-reform party, it adds.

"All changes are not reforms. The purpose of reforms is to make positive and constructive changes."

Democracy is the only way to protect people's rights and improve their lives. Just as the past fascist regime deprived people of rights with a narrative of "development first, democracy later", some people are now saying "reforms first. Democracy later", says the letter.

Novoair may be grounded from May

Currently, Novoair operates daily domestic flights connecting Dhaka to Chattogram, Cox's Bazar, Sylhet, Jashore, Saidpur and Rajshahi.

Flights on its lone international route of Kolkata have been suspended since September last year due to a shortage of passengers.

Although on paper Bangladesh has all the ingredients to be a money-spinner with a unique geographical location that allows it to serve as a transit hub for passengers coming from the Middle East and Europe to the Asia Pacific, a constantly growing pie of upwardly mobile population and an economy that is staking its claim in the global scheme of things, country's airlines industry remains in a sorry state.

At least eight private airlines were also urged the government to immediately initiate trials of the "fascist party and its associates".

The BNP called for prompt and effective measures to ensure compensation and proper treatment of the victims of July atrocities.

It stressed the need for stronger initiatives to control commodity prices, improve the law and order situation, and boost economic activities.

BNP reiterated its demand for the immediate withdrawal of all "false" cases filed during the "illegal 1/11 government and the fascist regime".

BNP leaders criticised two advisers who had participated in the July–August movement, saying they were using state power to benefit a political party, said a source.

Fakhrul said, "We are fully cooperating with the ongoing reform initiatives taken by the government...."

"We have made it very clear that we are willing to draft a charter on the issues where all parties reach a consensus and based on that... we can proceed towards the election.

forced to shut down their operations in the last 25 years, according to aviation experts.

The aviation industry in Bangladesh could not grow due to regulatory malfunction, excessive tariffs, high jet fuel prices, undue patronisation of the state-carrier Biman Bangladesh Airlines, said Kazi Wahidul Alam, editor of the Bangladesh Monitor.

"If the situation remains the same, airlines will come and go. They may sustain for 10 to 15 years but they will have to exit ultimately," he added.

There are regulatory roadblocks such as the high rates of surcharges, aeronautical, landing and parking fees and prohibitive jet fuel prices. About 40 to 46 percent of the operating costs of an airline are comprised of jet fuel, according to

As for the remaining reforms, the political party that comes to power will take steps to implement them."

LAW ADVISER'S BRIEFING

Asif said, "To me, they [BNP leaders] seemed content. When our meeting ended, I thought they had received answers to many of the questions on their minds. That's how I felt. Fakhrul Bhai might have felt differently."

The BNP secretary general has the right to express how he felt, and different individuals perceive things differently, he said.

December 2025 to June 2026 does not mean the government will deliberately delay the polls to enjoy power, he added.

"If December is feasible, it will be held in December. If not, then January," he said.

There is no way the polls will be delayed beyond June 2026, he added.

The BNP expressed concerns that the reforms might take time, Asif said. They have clearly stated that even if the July charter is ready, there are some legal and policy issues which would take time, he added.

Rahman.

GMG Airlines, United Airways and Regent Airways are vivid examples of private operators that had to ground their fleets as the surcharge dues piled up, according to aviation analysts.

Regent Airways, the latest private airline to cease operations, owes Tk 283 crore in surcharge, United Airways Tk 355 crore and GMG Airlines Tk 368 crore, according to data from the Civil Aviation Authority of Bangladesh.

"Once you fall into a backlog with the surcharge payments, there is no chance for you to turn around. The surcharge is a major reason why the airlines are struggling," Alam said.

The aeronautical, landing and parking charges are very high compared with other countries in the region.

continue to perform the same way as they did during Ramadan, there should be no problem in holding the next national elections, he said.

"In fact, the law and order situation during Ramadan was better than before. We believe it is gradually improving, and if they have another six to eight months, it will further improve."

Separate secretariat for judiciary in progress

Says chief justice

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Chief Justice Syed Refaat Ahmed yesterday said the process for establishing a separate secretariat for the judiciary is ongoing.

"The structural organogram and concept note are being scrutinised. If there is any constitutional and legal hurdle for its implementation, that will be resolved," he said at the Supreme Court.

On October 27 last year, the SC administration forwarded a proposal, along with a concept paper describing the necessity and objectives of a separate secretariat for the judiciary, to the law ministry.

A draft organogram of the secretariat was annexed to the proposal written by the chief justice. At present, the law ministry acts as the secretariat for the judiciary.

The FDC intersection in the capital experienced severe traffic congestion yesterday, along with other areas such as Farmgate, Bijoy Sarani, Karwan Bazar, Moghbazar, Malibagh, Mouchak, Hatirjheel and Gulshan. This happened due to students of polytechnic institutes starting blockades across the country to press home their six-point demand. Commuters found themselves stuck in traffic for several hours, with many being forced to walk to their destinations.

ROAD ACCIDENTS IN 2023

Hit-and-runs dominate DNCC crash data

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

At least 123 people were killed in 117 fatal road crashes in 2023 within the Dhaka North City Corporation area, with pedestrians making up the majority of victims, according to a new road safety report jointly prepared by DNCC and Dhaka Metropolitan Police.

Pedestrians accounted for 61 percent of the fatalities. The report said 87 percent of these fatal crashes were hit-and-run incidents. Motorcyclists were the second-largest group affected, comprising 24 percent of the total deaths.

Pedestrians accounted for 61 percent of the fatalities. The report said 87 percent of these fatal crashes were hit-and-run incidents. Motorcyclists were the second-largest group affected, comprising 24 percent of the total deaths.

The findings were presented at a road safety meeting held at a hotel in the capital yesterday, organised by the Road Transport and Highways Division and the Bloomberg Philanthropies Initiative for Global Road Safety (BIGRS), with support from DNCC, DMP, Chattogram City Corporation, and Chattogram Metropolitan Police.

The data was compiled from FIRs and written complaints filed for each fatal crash in the 25 police stations under DNCC's jurisdiction throughout 2023.

'A political group trying to delay Ducusu polls'

Alleges Chhatra Odhikar Parishad

DU CORRESPONDENT

A political group is trying to delay the Dhaka University Central Students' Union (Ducusu) election until after the national polls in a bid to control students and misuse power, similar to the previous regime, alleged Chhatra Odhikar Parishad yesterday.

Bin Yamin Mollah, president of the organisation's central committee, made the remarks at a press conference at Ducusu building.

The organisation demanded that an acceptable, participatory Ducusu election be held by June.

The timing of Ducusu elections has always been manipulated to serve the interests of the political parties, he added.

Part of poet Rafiq Azad's Dhanmondi house demolished

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

A part of the house of Ekushey Padak winning poet Rafiq Azad was demolished by the National Housing Authority yesterday morning in the presence of police.

Confirming the matter, the poet's wife, Professor Dilara Hafiz, said, "Without serving any prior notice, police arrived in the morning and demolished the western part of our house. Afterwards, they instructed us to quickly remove our furniture and essential belongings before temporarily suspending the eviction drive."

However, Tayeb-Ur-Rahman Ashik, executive magistrate of the National Housing Authority's Mirpur division-2, said the house of poet Rafiq Azad was not demolished during their operation.

Sufferings mount as blockades paralyse country

Polytechnic students block roads, railways over six-point demand; announce countrywide rail blockade today

STAR REPORT

Students of polytechnic institutes have announced a rail blockade across the country today to press home their six-point demand.

The new programme was announced more than eight hours after they staged blockades across the country yesterday, halting road and rail communication in more than a dozen districts as part of a coordinated movement.

An organiser of the protest announced the programme yesterday evening in Dhaka's Tejgaon area.

The students said they will continue their movement until their demands are met. They left the area around 6:30pm, ending yesterday's protest programme in the city.

The students' demands include the removal of "controversial craft instructors" recruited after 2021, restructuring the diploma engineering programme into a four-year course with six-month semesters, and reserving 10th grade engineering posts -- such as deputy assistant engineer -- exclusively for diploma graduates.

The protests caused widespread disruptions to public transport, leaving commuters stranded in long tailbacks and causing delays or suspensions of several train services.

The capital experienced severe traffic congestion in areas such as Farmgate, Bijoy Sarani, Karwan Bazar, Moghbazar, Malibagh, Mouchak, Hatirjheel, Gulshan, and the FDC intersection.

In Dhaka, over 1,000 students from Dhaka Polytechnic Institute blocked the Satrasta intersection in Tejgaon for nearly eight hours, starting at 10:30am.

The capital experienced severe traffic congestion in areas such as Farmgate, Bijoy Sarani, Karwan Bazar, Moghbazar, Malibagh, Mouchak, Hatirjheel, Gulshan, and the FDC intersection. The incoming lanes of the Elevated Expressway, especially around Tejgaon and Mohakhali, were also gridlocked.

Siam Almas, a private job holder, said, "I had to get off my vehicle near Hatirjheel and walk all the way to Farmgate amid rain."

Many others echoed him.

Traffic only began to ease after 6:00pm when students left the area, according to a statement from the Dhaka Metropolitan Police's Gulshan Traffic Division.

In Cumilla, over 500 students blocked the Dhaka-Chattogram highway at Kotbari Nandanpur from 11:40am to 1:35pm, resulting in an 8-kilometre tailback and stranding passengers in the intense heat.

Police and highway officials failed to disperse the crowd. The students withdrew after army personnel arrived and fired blank shots. Several students were

TK 1,000CR BOND SCAM

Salman F Rahman, Shibli Rubaiyat among 30 sued

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The ACC has filed a case against 30 individuals over allegations of embezzling Tk 1,000 crore through fraudulent bond issuance.

The accused include Salman F Rahman, former private industry and investment adviser to then prime minister, his son Ahmed Shayan Fazlur Rahman, and Shibli Rubaiyat-Ul-Islam, former chairman of the Bangladesh Securities and Exchange Commission, said ACC Director General Md Akhtar Hossain yesterday.

The accused facilitated issuance of bonds worth Tk 1,000 crore for a newly registered company -- Shripur Township Limited -- without acquiring a Credit Information Bureau report or assessing the mortgaged land.

Meanwhile, ACC is planning to seek assistance from international agencies to bring British lawmaker Tulip Siddiq, who has been accused of corruption, to Bangladesh so that she can place her statement over alleged plot forgery before a court.

Akhtar Hossain said due legal processes will be followed in cooperation with relevant global organisations to ensure her appearance in court.

Dedicated hospital for expats soon

Says Asif Nazrul

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Asif Nazrul, adviser to the Ministry of Expatriates' Welfare and Overseas Employment, yesterday announced that a dedicated hospital for expatriates will soon be established in Dhaka's Gulshan.

The hospital will be run by returnee expatriates, and its ownership will also be granted to expatriates through share purchases, he said while speaking at a programme organised by the Wage Earners' Welfare Board in Probashi Kalyan Bhaban.

The event included distribution of cheques for disability allowances, medical aid for ailing expatriates, and financial assistance and compensation to families of deceased expatriates.

European lawyers' body condemns Tureen's arrest

STAR REPORT

The Council of Bars and Law Societies of Europe (CCBE), representing over 1 million lawyers across 46 countries, has voiced concern over the recent arrest and alleged mistreatment of Barrister Tureen Afroz.

In a letter dated April 15 addressed to the chief adviser, CCBE President Thierry Wickers wrote, "The CCBE wishes to express its concerns over the arbitrary arrest and inhumane treatment of Barrister Tureen Afroz."

The CCBE also referenced a prior incident in August 2024, where she was reportedly subjected to a violent and degrading physical assault by unidentified attackers, allegedly in retaliation for her work at the ICT.

Covered vans remain parked haphazardly, covering a majority of a footpath on Satrasta. As a result, pedestrians have little space to no space to cross. The photo was taken yesterday.

ICT to quiz Ansar member over July shooting

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The International Crimes Tribunal has granted permission to its investigation agency to interrogate Ansar member Omar Faruk, who was caught on video allegedly shooting a protester in Dhaka's Mohammadpur area during the July uprising.

The order came yesterday from the three-member tribunal, headed by Justice Md Golam Mortuza Mozumder, following a petition by the prosecution.

Prosecutor Gazi Monawar Hossain Tamim told the tribunal that investigators have obtained substantial evidence, including photographs and video footage, linked to the incident.

In one such video, Faruk is allegedly seen firing a shot at a protester from a very close range in Mohammadpur.

The footage also reveals the presence of several law enforcement officials and individuals believed to be political activists. The prosecutor argued that Faruk's interrogation is crucial to uncover their role in the incident.

Part of poet Rafiq

According to Ashik, there are four one-storey buildings on the premises, all of which are occupied by tenants. Of these, two buildings – including Rafiq Azad's residence – are protected by a High Court status quo order.

"We demolished two buildings located at the back of Rafiq Azad's house," he said.

Ashik said although no part of Rafiq Azad's residence was demolished, the executive engineer concerned has assured him that the boundary wall will be rebuilt.

The four-unit house includes one unit occupied by Dilara Hafiz, while the other three are reportedly allocated to different individuals. The western section of the house, located at 139/4A, Road 1, Dhanmondi, covers approximately five kathas of land.

In 1988, the Estate Office temporarily allocated the single-storey house to Dilara Hafiz, then a lecturer at Eden College.

Years later, a man named Syed Nehal Ahad claimed ownership of the property and, in 2012, obtained a court verdict in his favour.

Dilara Hafiz subsequently filed a case against him, the Ministry of Housing and Public Works, and the National Housing Authority. The court issued a stay order, later made permanent the following year.

The case was later transferred to the 7th Assistant Judge's Court in Dhaka, with the next hearing for witness testimony scheduled for May 25.

On Tuesday, Dilara Hafiz sent letters to Adilur Rahman Khan, adviser to the housing and public works ministry, as well as the Ministry of Cultural Affairs, outlining the legal status of the property.

Despite this, the eviction drive proceeded early Wednesday morning.

Dilara Hafiz, a retired chairperson of the Board of Intermediate and Secondary Education, said, "We have been consistently requesting the government to preserve this house as a memorial to Rafiq Azad since his death in 2016."

"Most recently, we met with Adviser Adilur Rahman on April 11. He told us the legal process would take its own course. Then suddenly, without any formal notice, the demolition began on Wednesday morning. They did not give us any deadline to vacate the house," she added.

reportedly injured following the army's involvement.

A press release from the 33rd Infantry Division of the Bangladesh Army stated that troops were deployed to restore order as the situation became increasingly disorderly. They claimed that blank shots were fired to disperse the crowd and that no injuries occurred.

One student, Saimun Islam Noman, a student from Cumilla Polytechnic Institute, was handed over to the police.

However, Rubai Khanam, upazila nirbahi officer of Cumilla Sadar South, said although the army joined to maintain order, the administration did not authorise using blank fire.

In Chattogram, students blocked CDA Avenue near the Gate-2 intersection around 11:30am, disrupting traffic on both CDA Avenue and Bayezid Road. They also briefly occupied a nearby railway track.

The blockade ended around 2:30pm following an altercation with drivers and police intervention. Protesters later marched to the deputy commissioner's office.

In Rajshahi, students blocked both road and rail communication. In Khulna, students from four polytechnic institutes blocked train services by occupying the tracks at Baikali Junction around 9:15am. Train services resumed after nearly three hours following discussions with police.

In Barishal, students demonstrated in front of the Nathullahabad Bus Terminal from 12:00pm to 12:25pm, halting traffic on the Dhaka-Barishal highway and 22 regional routes. The protest ended after requests from police and army personnel.

Protests were also reported in Narsingdi, Tangail, Feni, Dinajpur, Chhapainwaganj, Sirajganj, Pabna, Natore, Naogaon, Bogura, Kushtia, Mymensingh, and several other districts.

"For the journey, we contacted a broker and paid him Tk 5,000. He assured us a safe passage to Tripura through the Lalarchak border without any official documents," she said.

"Swarna was holding my hand. We were inside Bangladeshi territory and heading towards the zero line. Suddenly, a bullet hit her in the back – while we were still within Bangladesh.

"My daughter died on the spot. I somehow managed to drag her body back towards our locality, but I don't remember how – I lost consciousness."

Sanjita regained consciousness a day later in a hospital bed.

Following the incident, BSF personnel took Swarna's body into Indian territory. It was returned two days later after several flag meetings between BGB and BSF.

While visiting Swarna's school, this newspaper saw that her classmates and teachers had kept her seat empty in remembrance.

"Swarna was an excellent athlete. She won several awards in long jump, high jump, and sprint events over the years," said Alam Bashar, the school's sports teacher.

On Pahela Baishakh, members of the 52 BGB Battalion in Beanibazar gifted the grieving family a high-yielding Fijian cow raised on the BGB's farm. BGB personnel also spent time with the family, offering comfort and solidarity.

Lt Col Md Mehedi Hasan, commanding officer of the battalion, said, "Swarna's death is a deeply tragic incident. We have supported the family from day one and will continue to do so."

Hit-and-runs

The report further said men accounted for 83 percent of the victims. Buses and trucks were frequently responsible for deadly collisions involving both pedestrians and motorcyclists.

Fatalities were more common during the night than the day, though no clear trend emerged regarding days of the week or months. Two locations – the east side of the Airport Flyover and the Mirpur 1 Intersection – each recorded five deaths, the highest within the DNCC area.

The report made five key recommendations, including prioritising pedestrian safety and focusing interventions at high-risk locations. Suggested measures included raised crosswalks, pedestrian refuge islands, narrowed lanes, expansion of designated bus stops, and increased police capacity to investigate fatal hit-and-run cases.

Speaking at the event, Road Transport and Highways Division Senior Secretary Ehsanul Hoque said the government is drafting a comprehensive road safety law aligned with the WHO's safe system approach.

officer at Kulaura, acknowledged that most people do not feel the need to seek permission before converting farmland.

"There's no awareness or accountability," he said. "There is a law for protecting agricultural land, but its implementation is severely lacking," said Nurul Mohaimin Milton, general secretary of Bangladesh Paribesh Sangbadik Samitee in Moulvibazar.

He stressed the need for written permissions from local authorities before any construction on farmland. "Even if it's private property, approval from the local union parishad or municipality should be mandatory," he added.

According to Mohammad Nasir Uddin, senior monitoring officer at the DAE, cultivable land in the division dropped from 7,64,240 hectares in 2019 to 7,29,235 hectares in 2024 – a loss of 35,005 hectares in just five years.

Badrul Huda, assistant director of the Department of Environment (DoE), Sylhet, said this alarming trend is not limited to Sylhet, similar activities are taking place across the country.

He highlighted the particularly damaging practice of removing topsoil – the nutrient rich layer vital for crop production – and selling it to brick kilns. "Once this fertile layer is stripped, the land's productivity drops drastically and becomes unsuitable for cultivation in the long term."

He emphasised the need for greater public awareness and stricter enforcement of environmental and land use laws.

"Protecting agricultural land is not just a regulatory issue – it's a national responsibility. If we continue to overlook this, the long-term consequences will be irreversible."

Sylhet lost 35,005 hectares of farmland in 5yrs

MINTU DESHWARA

Unchecked land filling in Sylhet division is putting the region's future of agriculture at grave risk, as farmlands are rapidly being converted into residential, commercial, and multi-storied structures.

Once known for producing Aus, Aman, and Rabi-season crops, these fertile lands are now dotted with concrete buildings and paved roads. The transformation is particularly noticeable along roadways, where construction continues unchecked, with little regard for long-term environmental consequences or the country's food security.

"Residential and commercial buildings are being built by filling up arable land, especially in areas known for producing three-season crops," said Binol Chandra Shome, additional director of the Department of Agricultural Extension (DAE) in Sylhet.

Sadek Mia, a resident of Kamalganj, echoed him.

Md Manowar Hossain, upazila

agriculture officer at Barlekha, said Bangladesh is losing agricultural land at a rate of around one percent per year. This, he warned, not only threatens food security but also disrupts natural habitats, including those critical for fish breeding.

He said about 10 percent of new constructions are taking place on roadside arable lands, with a significant portion of expatriate income being spent on building houses and commercial establishments.

Md Jalal Uddin, deputy director of the Department of Agricultural Extension in Moulvibazar, said, "Establishments are being built rapidly by filling in farmland. If this continues, food shortages are not unlikely."

Local farmer Siddiqur Rahman from Kamalganj said, "In the absence of policy enforcement, people are constructing buildings on farmland however they please."

Ex-DGHS driver Malek, wife jailed in graft case

COURT CORRESPONDENT

Abdul Malek, a former driver of the Directorate General of Health Service (DGHS), and his wife Nargis Begum were yesterday sentenced to five and three years of imprisonment respectively, in a case filed over amassing wealth worth Tk 1.10 crore illegally.

Malek was sentenced to five years in jail for assisting his wife to acquire the wealth, while Nargis was given three years in jail for acquiring the wealth through illegal means.

Judge Md Jakaria Hossain of Dhaka Special Judge's Court-6 pronounced the verdict in the presence of the couple at the courtroom.

The judge also fined Malek Tk 20,000, in default of which he will have to serve five months more in jail.

On the other hand, Nargis was fined Tk 20,000, in default of which she will have to serve three months more in prison.

In the judgement, the judge said the prosecution was able to prove the charges brought against the couple undoubtedly and they were given the punishment for committing the offences.

The judge also ordered the authorities concerned to confiscate Tk 1,10,92,050 earned illegally by them.

Earlier, the prosecution and the defence completed their arguments, and the court recorded statements of 16 prosecution witnesses.

KILLING OF SWARNA DAS 7 months on, fear still lingers at Lalarchak border

SHAHEEN MOLLAH, back from Moulvibazar

For the past seven months, farmers in Kulaura upazila of Moulvibazar have stayed away from their land near the Lalarchak border, fearing attacks allegedly by India's Border Security Force (BSF).

Panic still grips the local farming community and neighbouring villages following the death of 14-year-old Swarna Das, who was shot dead on September 1 last year.

"The farmers have stopped cultivating their land, leaving the fields abandoned out of fear of being shot by the BSF. Since Swarna's death, even locals and children no longer roam or play near the border," said Tajul Islam, a former member of Sharifpur union.

SANJITA RANI DAS

Swarna's mother

During a recent visit to the area, this correspondent saw many fields near the border left overgrown and uncared for.

Lt Col ASM Zakaria, commanding officer of Border Guard Bangladesh (46-BGB Battalion), said, "We maintain strict security vigilance at the border. There is nothing to be afraid of."

Swarna, an eighth-grader at Nirod Bihari High School in Juri upazila, was reportedly shot and killed by BSF members while attempting to cross the border through Lalarchak.

Speaking at her home, Swarna's mother, Sanjita Rani Das, said she and her daughter were on their way to Tripura to visit her brother.

Girl raped on moving bus

Driver, helper held

STAFF CORRESPONDENT, Ctg

A 14-year-old girl was allegedly raped on a moving bus in Chattogram's Bahaddarhat area on Tuesday night.

Police yesterday arrested the bus driver and his assistant in connection with the incident.

The victim, a student, was travelling alone from Cox's Bazar to a relative's home in Chattogram city.

According to police, the incident took place between Tuesday evening and early yesterday.

Chandgaon Police Station Officer-in-Charge Aftab Uddin told The Daily Star that after all the passengers got off the bus, the driver, helper, and supervisor did not allow the girl to leave the bus. They took the bus to an isolated area near the Bahaddarhat flyover and raped her.

Around 4:00am yesterday, the perpetrators dropped her off near the Kaptai Road area. A police patrol team noticed her standing alone, and upon questioning, she disclosed the incident.

The girl was later admitted to Chittagong Medical College and Hospital.

Police said the bus supervisor, identified as Mobarak, remains at large. The victim's mother filed a case with the Chandgaon Police Station.

2 killed as vehicle falls into drain

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Savar

Two persons were killed and three others injured after a human haulier fell into a roadside drain in Ashulia yesterday.

The deceased are Badrul Alam and Hridoy Mia.

The incident occurred around 7:30pm in Jamgara area, said Kamal Hossain, inspector at Ashulia Police Station.

He said the vehicle fell into the rainwater-filled drain as the driver failed to notice it. The two were declared dead at a local hospital.

‘Borbaad’, ‘Daagi’ and ‘Jongli’ dominate box office, gear up for global release

With packed halls and sustained audience turnout weeks after Eid, local films Borbaad, Daagi, and Jongli have emerged as box office hits, prompting their release in international markets. Due to their overwhelming success, no foreign films have been screened in local multiplexes post-Eid. Borbaad, starring Shakib Khan, will be released in the US on April 18 and in Canada on April 19, followed by screenings in Australia, New Zealand, and the Middle East. It is being distributed by SK Films. Directed by M Raahim, Jongli is set for international release on April 25 across the US, Canada, England, Ireland, Sweden, and Australia. Shihab Shaheen's Daagi, featuring Afran Nisho, is already showing in Australia and is slated for release in New Zealand, the US, and Canada.

Ferdous Wahid debuts as host with Habib Wahid as first guest Veteran musician Ferdous Wahid is set to make his debut as a television host through a show titled Chena Mukh Dukkho Shukh. Interestingly, his first episode as a host features an interview with none other than his son, musician Habib Wahid.

The studio recordings for three episodes of Chena Mukh Dukkho Shukh took place on Tuesday (April 15). In one of the episodes, Ferdous Wahid interviews his son, Habib Wahid. The other two episodes feature appearances by musicians Hyder Husyn and Agun.

When asked about his first-time experience as a host, Ferdous Wahid told the media, "It was a different kind of experience. I really enjoyed it because I got to work on something new. I interviewed musician Habib in my own way, and he answered in his own way. I noticed that all the guests really enjoyed the process. That's when I realised—I must have done something right."

In this show, artistes will talk about their experiences in their careers and life. In essence, the programme aims to delve into the inner world and the reflections of an artiste. The conversations will be interspersed with musical performances by the guests.

The 16-episode series will begin airing on Channel i starting April 30.

‘Khona’ returns to stage for 92nd show

Acclaimed theatre troupe BotTala will stage the 92nd performance of its celebrated production Khona on April 18 at the Experimental Theatre Hall of Bangladesh Shilpakala Academy. Directed by Mohammad Ali Haider and written by Samina Luthfa Nitra, the play portrays the life of legendary astrologer Lilabati, known as Khona, exploring gender, class, and power dynamics.

Debuting during International Women's Day centenary celebrations, Khona has received critical acclaim both at home and abroad for its powerful critique of patriarchy.

Performed by a large ensemble cast, the show coincides with the Bengali New Year, which BotTala marks as a tribute to the resilience of women and Bangladesh's cultural legacy. The show starts at 7pm.

Eid films mark milestone for local industry, says Rashed Mamun Apu

SHAH ALAM SHAZU

Actor Rashed Mamun Apu, who appeared in two of this Eid's major releases—Daagi and Jongli—has described the festive season as a significant milestone for Bangladeshi cinema. In a conversation with The Daily Star, the actor shared that it had been a long time since audiences experienced such vibrant and healthy competition among multiple quality films during Eid.

"Each film released this season is well-executed, and viewers are responding with genuine enthusiasm. It's a promising sign for our film industry," he remarked.

Apu, who is contesting for the post of General Secretary in the upcoming Actors' Association election on April 19, added that the polls would reflect a celebration of participation. Reflecting on his previous term, he noted, "We gave our best effort; now the members will decide."

The actor further revealed that discussions are underway for three upcoming projects, including films and web-series, which he hopes to finalise soon.

As Bangladeshi cinema continues to draw crowds both locally and internationally, Apu remains hopeful that this momentum will sustain beyond the festive season.

Fazlur Rahman, head of the commission.

"We have already interviewed some of those incarcerated. Twenty-three individuals who need to be contacted for the investigation are currently abroad, among whom eight have responded and are willing to be interviewed," he added.

Fazlur, also the former director general of the BGB, said the commission is also focusing on identifying the pattern of killings and torture that unfolded during the mutiny.

"After the director general was killed, others were executed. This was a planned massacre. Such an act cannot take place without careful planning.

"It feels like a repetition of Palashi. We must get to the root of it," he said.

Maj Gen (ret'd) Jahangir Kabir

Talukder, another member of the commission, said, "Despite such a heinous crime, not a single officer or employee was removed from duty. No one was held accountable. This reflects a failure of the intelligence agencies, the military, and the political leadership."

Chief Adviser Prof Muhammad Yunus said, "They brutally killed their own officers. It was carried out with chilling precision.

"The entire nation is looking towards the investigation commission. We are all searching for answers. The commission must succeed in uncovering the truth behind this incident."

Other members of the commission present at the meeting included Brig Gen Md Saidur Rahman, Munshi Alauddin Al Azad, M Akbar Ali, Md Shariiful Islam, Shahnewaz Khan Chandan, and ATM Iqbal.

Pakistan's Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif and Yunus met twice since then: first on the sidelines of the UN General Assembly in New York in September last year and later at the D-8 summit in Cairo in December.

Since then, Bangladesh has eased visa rules for Pakistani nationals and launched direct shipping. Pakistan is keen to organise cultural exchange and boost trade, tourism and investment.

"Pakistan sees potential for boosting exports to Bangladesh, especially if their products are price competitive," said Bangladesh High Commissioner to Pakistan Iqbal Hussain Khan, who is now in Dhaka for the meeting.

Pakistan aims to export products like cotton, sugar, rice and wheat, he said. In fiscal 2023-24, Bangladesh exported $61.98 million to Pakistan and imported goods worth $627.8 million.

As Pakistan serves as a gateway for goods from Afghanistan and Iran, Dhaka can export many goods from those countries through Pakistan, Khan added.

Discussions are also underway on starting direct flights between Bangladesh and Pakistan, he added.

In the last FOC in 2015, discussions were held on several issues, including Pakistan's unconditional apology for the 1971 war crimes, compensation for war damages, repatriation of stranded Pakistanis, Bangladesh's rightful share of pre-1971 assets and repayment of foreign aid during the 1970 cyclone.

The notice also mentioned that banks must provide names, mobile phone numbers, and email addresses as provided on their internal identification units responsible for identifying the wilful defaulters.

Trump admin seeks to scrap funding decide to restore some or all of the funding the administration has proposed cutting.

The State Department was due to respond to the OMB proposal on Tuesday. During US President Donald Trump's first term he proposed cutting about a third of diplomacy and aid budgets. But Congress, which sets the federal government budget, pushed back on Trump's proposal.

"There is no final plan, final budget," State Department spokesperson Tammy Bruce told reporters on Tuesday when asked about the OMB proposals.

The OMB has proposed ending Contributions for International Peacekeeping Activities (CIPA).

"For example, Passback provides no funding for CIPA, ending contributions for international peacekeeping due to the recent failures in peacekeeping, such as with MINUSMA, UNIFIL, and MONUSCO, and the disproportionately high level of assessments," according to an excerpt from the Passback.

The United Nations peacekeeping budget funds nine missions in Mali, Lebanon, Democratic Republic of Congo, South Sudan, Western Sahara, Cyprus, Kosovo, between Syria and the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights and Abyei, an administrative area that is jointly run by South Sudan and Sudan.

The OMB Passback also proposed the creation of a $2.1 billion America First Opportunities Fund (AIOF), which it said would be used to cover a limited set of foreign economic and development assistance priorities.

"Should the Administration seek to pay any assessments for the United Nations Regular Budget or peacekeeping assessments, we would look to provide that funding from the AIOF," read the OMB Passback.

UN spokesperson Stephane Dujarric on Tuesday declined to comment on "what appears to be a leaked memo that is part of an internal debate within the US government."

The US owes - for arrears and the current fiscal year - nearly $1.5 billion for the regular UN budget and nearly $1.2 billion for the peacekeeping budget. A country can be up to two years in arrears before facing the possible repercussion of losing its vote in the 193-member General Assembly.

UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres last month said he is seeking ways to improve efficiency and cut costs as the world body turns 80 this year amid a cash crisis.

minister Sheikh Hasina used in the Shobhajatra."

The artist, who was at home in the Garpara Bazar area of Manikganj Sadar upazila during the arson attack, said the room having the sculptures was set ablaze around 2:30am, destroying 30 sculptures. "On information, police and fire service members rushed there and brought the fire under control."

"All the sculptures I had made since my training time and all the furniture in the room were damaged by then."

Mohammad Salauddin, an additional superintendent of Manikganj police, said on April 13, a campaign was launched through Facebook page 'Rajya Sabha' that Manabendra fashioned the face of Hasina like a monster.

"Manabendra then lodged a GD with Manikganj Sadar Police Station. Since then, police have been keeping an eye on his safety. But around 2:30am today [Wednesday], someone set fire to the house. Getting information, we reached the spot and started legal proceedings."

Earlier, quoting Manikganj Police Superintendent Yasmin Khatun, the chief adviser's press wing shared information on Facebook that a police team already visited the spot, and an investigation was underway.

"Swift action will be taken against those responsible," the SP said.

Manikganj Deputy Commissioner Manwar Hossain Molla said a six-member committee, led by Additional District Magistrate Nazmul Hasan Khan, was formed to investigate the fire and it has been asked to submit a report within three working days.

Meanwhile, Cultural Affairs Adviser Mostofa Sarwar Farooki in his Facebook page wrote, "Police have started work to detain everyone who attacked the house of artist Manabendra Ghosh. We spoke to the home adviser who has given clear instructions to the IGP."

He alleged that over the past few days, the Awami League has been inciting the attack on Manabendra online for "making an effigy of Hasina!"

Mujibnagar Day today

Around 10:00am that day, the leaders went to a mango orchard in Baidyanathatala, to hold the oath-taking ceremony amid the war.

The Mujibnagar government had been formed seven days earlier, with the aim of conducting the Liberation War and officially declaring the independence of Bangladesh.

The Members of National Assembly and Members of Provincial Assembly who were in India also formed a constituent assembly.

Tajuddin Ahmad was sworn in as the prime minister. Baidyanathatala was later named Mujibnagar.

After the swearing-in, Syed Nazrul

Islam, with MAG Osmani, newly appointed commander-in-chief of Bangladesh Defence Forces, took the salute and an inspection of the guard followed.

The acting president raised the red, green and yellow flag amid thunderous applause. It was hoisted while the leaders sang Amar Sonar Bangla in unison.

Remittances not at the cost of lives

Ensure safe recruitment and working conditions for migrant workers

It is unfortunate that we celebrate the remittance earnings of our migrant workers but our actions fall drastically short when it comes to ensuring their safety, dignity, and well-being both at home and abroad. In particular, the steady stream of coffins returning home—with migrants' lives cut short by health issues, workplace accidents, etc.—is a stark reminder of our collective failure to protect them.

According to the Wage Earners' Welfare Board, 4,813 bodies of migrant workers were brought back to Bangladesh in 2024 alone. The number of deaths has been rising steadily since 2020, increasing by more than 50 percent. In total, over the past four decades, at least 57,216 migrant workers' bodies have been repatriated. Many more are buried overseas, with families sometimes choosing not to bring the bodies home. When a body is repatriated, the Welfare Board provides Tk 35,000 for burial and transport costs. Besides, under a 2023 insurance scheme, families of insured workers who paid a one-time Tk 1,000 premium can receive up to Tk 10 lakh in the event of a work-related death.

Ironically, the official causes of death in most cases are listed as strokes, brain haemorrhages, or heart attacks—categorised as “natural causes.” But experts have questioned this narrative, pointing out that most deceased workers were between 38 and 42 years old and reportedly had no prior health issues. Unfortunately, bodies are not re-autopsied upon return to Bangladesh. As a government official told this daily, rather unconvincingly, it is “difficult” to probe these untimely deaths further as autopsies conducted in host countries fall under their legal jurisdiction. But the question remains: Why, after all these years, have we failed to ensure a transparent and credible process for investigating the deaths of our migrant workers?

Government data shows that most of these deaths occur in the Gulf region, where extreme heat and gruelling work conditions—especially at construction sites—have taken a severe toll. A 2023 study highlighted the link between excessive heat and poor health outcomes among workers in the Gulf. Yet, there has been little visible effort to negotiate better terms for Bangladeshi workers abroad.

Given these realities, we urge the government to push for safer and more humane recruitment and working conditions in host countries. Employers must be compelled to comply with international labour standards, ensuring not just better wages but also improved living conditions and healthcare access. At the same time, migration costs must be reduced so that workers are not forced to endure dangerous jobs just to recover their investment. The authorities must also ramp up efforts to crack down on fraudulent agents involved in fake recruitment, wage theft, and forced labour. We must remember that migrant workers deserve protection, dignity, and justice. Their lives, health, and the well-being of their families must be as high a priority as the remittances they send home.

Take steps to repair Pirojpur roads

Regular maintenance, provision of funds necessary

It is disheartening to learn about the deplorable condition of roads in Pirojpur municipality, where nearly 90 percent reportedly require urgent repairs. According to sources, aside from around 20 kilometres of paved roads and approximately 70 kilometres of earthen roads, most roads across the nine wards remain damaged. For instance, the Dhuppasha Road has been unfit for vehicular movement for nearly a decade. As a result, vehicles are often forced to navigate carefully due to potholes and uneven surfaces, while many residents choose to walk as a safer alternative. Unfortunately, the municipal authorities have taken no meaningful steps to renovate these roads, citing a lack of funds.

Pirojpur's situation is hardly unique. Roads in districts and villages across the country often suffer from the same fate. In many cases, roads become dilapidated soon after construction due to the use of substandard materials. In others, projects remain incomplete or abandoned for years. Numerous reports have exposed the inefficiency, mismanagement, and corruption within the Local Government Engineering Department (LGED) that oversees most of these projects. One such example is a road constructed by LGED in Patuakhali's Bauphal upazila, which collapsed just a day after completion. In another case, an 11-kilometre road in Narayanganj deteriorated within six months of repairs.

The condition of bridges is similarly troubling. For instance, in the Amtali upazila of Barguna, the collapse of 10 iron bridges in just eight months severely impacted around 65,000 residents. Likewise, a concrete bridge built over the Banshbaria canal in Patuakhali remains unused due to the absence of approach roads—another example of poor planning and execution.

These cases reflect a chronic lack of attention towards road infrastructure outside the capital and major cities, particularly in rural and municipal areas. A Prothom Alo report from last year noted that about 50 percent of LGED roads required repairs, while many village roads were unusable—a situation that remains largely unchanged to this day. Insufficient budget allocations often delay necessary maintenance, which ends up costing more in the long run. This scenario must change. The government must not only ensure adequate funding for repair but also overhaul its project implementation processes. The practice of awarding contracts to politically connected contractors must end to ensure accountability and quality. For Pirojpur municipality, in particular, immediate fund allocation and repair are paramount.

Post-LDC challenges and the future of our exports

Mamun Rashid, an economic analyst, is chairman at Financial Excellence Ltd and founding managing partner of PwC Bangladesh.

MAMUN RASHID

As Bangladesh approaches its graduation from the Least Developed Country (LDC) category, the anticipated challenges of losing preferential trade benefits are already manifesting. The United States has recently imposed a 37 percent reciprocal tariff on imports from Bangladesh, which is a significant blow to the latter's exports. Though the tariff's execution has been temporarily put on hold, if not resolved in time, this sudden increase threatens to erode the country's competitiveness in its largest export destination.

Concurrently, India has withdrawn the transshipment facility that previously allowed Bangladeshi exports to third countries via Indian ports and airports. This decision, which the Indian authorities claim is aimed at alleviating congestion and costs in India's own export channels, is expected to disrupt Bangladesh's export logistics, particularly affecting shipments to some countries. These developments underscore the urgent need for Bangladesh to diversify its export portfolio, invest in infrastructure development, revisit the trade architecture, and engage in strategic trade negotiations to mitigate the impacts of its LDC graduation.

The path ahead is becoming clearer, and more complicated. While diversification has long been a talking point, it is now a matter of survival. Relying on the export of ready-made garment (RMG) products alone is no longer an option. Bangladesh must invest in building up sectors that have already shown early signs of promise. Pharmaceuticals, ICT, and agro-processing are no longer fringe players. They are contenders, capable of anchoring the next chapter of the country's export story. Take pharmaceuticals, for instance. The world's appetite for generic medicine continues to grow, and Bangladesh has both the factories and the know-how to meet that demand. The transition from the LDC status could actually open the door for producing patented drugs, a game-changer if handled right.

But shifting what we sell is only half the equation. Where we sell must change too. For years, Bangladesh's export playbook has read like a short list: the European Union, the US, Canada—dependable, but limited. The world is bigger than that. Africa, South America, the Middle East and even some large economies in Asia are waking up as consumer markets. These are regions with rising demand, growing populations, and very few Bangladeshi products on their shelves. Cracking these markets will not be easy. It will mean understanding local tastes, building smarter logistics, and pricing with precision. But the opportunity is real, and the timing has never been better.

The other force reshaping competitiveness is less visible but equally powerful: technology. Automation, artificial intelligence, and real-time data have changed how factories run and decisions are made. In Bangladesh, these tools have been met with some hesitation, and understandably so. Fear of job losses is not unfounded. But the truth is, technology can enhance jobs as much as it replaces them. A sewing machine operator can become a line technician. A production supervisor can become a systems analyst. What is needed is training—not just any training, but programmes that are fast, focused, and aligned with the real industry needs. If done right, automation does not hollow out the workforce; rather it strengthens it.

a systemic overhaul—faster customs, smarter ports, and better roads—because the supply chain has to move as fast as the market it serves.

As the world grows more demanding, compliance is no longer a choice. It is the ticket to staying in the game. Product safety, labour rights, and environmental responsibility are the new benchmarks. Global buyers want transparency, certifications, traceability, and proof that what they are sourcing is ethical. This means companies must invest in more than just machines. They must invest in processes that show compliance and in people who can manage it. The government must play a part in this as well. Streamlined standards, quicker approvals, and constant engagement with exporters will make the difference between staying competitive and falling behind.

Trade diplomacy, once a quiet background act, now needs a front-row seat. The era of simply receiving trade perks is ending. Bangladesh must learn to negotiate on its own terms. It will not be easy, but the playbook is out there. Vietnam, with its network of deals stretching from Europe to Asia, has shown what is possible when trade is treated as strategy. Bangladesh has the size, the location, and the market to cut its own deals; what it needs now is the will to execute.

Sustainability, once seen as a luxury, is fast becoming a business requirement. Major retailers are making it clear: green practices are no longer treated as an add-on. And Bangladesh, surprisingly, is already ahead of the curve. The country is home to the largest number of certified green RMG factories in the world, which gives us a competitive edge. The next step is to scale that success and make it visible to the global consumer. Sustainability should not just be part of the story. It should be THE story.

The choices Bangladesh makes in the next few years will define the next few decades. Graduation from the LDC status is not the end of the journey, but the beginning of a harder one. A journey that will test the depth of strategy, the speed of execution, and the strength of collective will. But as history has shown, Bangladesh has never lacked resolve. The real question now is whether it can turn that resolve into reinvention.

Is the BNP really anti-reform?

H.M. Nazmul Alam is an academic, journalist, and political analyst. He can be reached at nazmulalam.rjohnd@gmail.com.

H.M. NAZMUL ALAM

In a political climate defined more by slogans than substance, the Bangladesh Nationalist Party (BNP) finds itself in an ironic predicament. Despite being the first major party in Bangladesh to propose a full-scale roadmap for national reform, it has been accused of being anti-reform, status quo-driven, or politically outdated. The reality, however, deserves careful unpacking.

In as early as 2016, BNP unveiled its “Vision 2030,” a document that laid out a comprehensive reform agenda covering governance, decentralisation, electoral transparency, and economic restructuring. During the anti-authoritarian mass uprising and the subsequent transition to an interim government, BNP not only extended support to the movement but also expanded its reform agenda. These were not merely cosmetic additions; they dealt with core state functions—from electoral reforms and institutional balance to judicial independence and decentralisation of power.

And yet, criticisms have continued to swirl around BNP—criticisms that allege resistance to change, a lack of willingness to share power, or a refusal to support reforms such as a bicameral parliament or the redistribution of executive authority.

BNP's position has often been interpreted as reluctance. Take, for example, the proposed reconfiguration of Article 70 of the constitution, which currently disallows MPs from voting against party lines. BNP has voiced support for amending it, but within boundaries: maintaining party discipline during votes of no-confidence, money bills, and constitutional amendments, while allowing greater autonomy otherwise. This is not obstructionism—it is a safeguard against returning to the era of chaotic floor-crossing and “horse-trading” that plagued parliamentary politics in other countries.

Similarly, BNP's reservations about allowing the proposed National Constitutional Council (NCC)—an unelected body—to make major state appointments are grounded in concerns about undermining democratic accountability. In a parliamentary system, if key powers are shifted away from the elected prime minister and parliament, we risk hollowing out the very core of representative democracy. As constitutional scholar Vernon Bogdanor observed, “Reform is not the destination of democracy, but its servant. When it begins to undermine representation, it ceases to serve.”

BNP agreed with 20 of the 23 recommendations on judicial reform, 19 of the 20 recommendations on Anti-Corruption Commission reform, and even with a significant portion of reform proposals regarding public administration. Disagreements reform, particularly when such ideas risk further weakening the country's fragile democratic architecture. The acting chairman of BNP, Tarique Rahman, has emphasised this point on several occasions. In a 2023 address, he said, “We are not against reform. We are against experimentalism that jeopardises the people's mandate and institutional stability.”

Reform, as history shows us, is always a process—never a precondition

reform, particularly when such ideas risk further weakening the country's fragile democratic architecture. The acting chairman of BNP, Tarique Rahman, has emphasised this point on several occasions. In a 2023 address, he said, “We are not against reform. We are against experimentalism that jeopardises the people's mandate and institutional stability.”

Reform, as history shows us, is always a process—never a precondition for elections. Some voices within the civil society have advocated for completing reforms before holding elections. While the intention may be noble, perhaps the prescription is constitutionally and politically impractical. Reforms, in a democracy, are carried out by elected governments through their electoral mandate. As political theorist Adam Przeworski writes, “Democracy does not promise the best policies, but it guarantees the right to change them.”

BNP has invested considerable resources in building consensus around its 31-point roadmap—holding dialogues, consultations, and campaigns in every district, upazila, union, and ward across the country. No other political party has engaged the grassroots so comprehensively on the question of reform. This is not just political strategy; it is democratic pedagogy.

It is worth asking why, despite this sustained effort, BNP is so frequently labelled as anti-reform. The answer may lie in the uneasy political ecosystem of Bangladesh—one in which narratives are often manufactured by partisan echo chambers and amplified by select voices. This, unfortunately, has blurred public perception and reduced complex debates to simplistic binaries: pro-reform vs anti-reform, old vs new, movement vs mainstream.

But such binaries ignore a crucial reality. BNP, despite its past mistakes and the political baggage it carries, remains one of the few parties capable of translating reform into governance. Political scientist Larry Diamond's caution is relevant here, “Democratic reforms fail not because of lack of good ideas, but because of the absence of political will and organisational strength.”

Bangladesh stands at a critical crossroads today. Reform is necessary, but not at the cost of elections, and certainly not if it sidelines the very concept of democratic choice. In the end, it is not slogans or social media narratives that will rebuild our institutions—it is political courage, strategic clarity, and an unflinching commitment to the people's mandate. BNP, with all its imperfections, remains one of the few forces in Bangladesh today that is capable of doing that.

The Proclamation of Independence was a beacon for Bangladesh

is a journalist and researcher.

PRIYAM PAUL

On the historic day of April 17, 1971, the Government of Bangladesh took its oath at Baidyanathala in Meherpur, later renamed Mujibnagar. This was the first official government formed to lead Bangladesh's Liberation War, following the declaration of independence on March 26, 1971. Widely known as the Mujibnagar government-in-exile, it operated from outside the occupied territory but had a profound impact on the then East Pakistan. The formation of this government marked a historic milestone—the emergence of the first modern nation-state of the Bangalee people.

Prior to that, April 10, 1971 stands as a milestone when Bangladesh formally asserted its independence through the Proclamation of Independence, an act of political defiance amid the war, atrocities, and genocide committed by the Pakistan Army. Emerging from an initial vacuum of leadership and direction, the proclamation laid the foundation for the country's distinct political identity and its eventual path to independence.

In March 1971, while President Gen Yahya Khan was ostensibly engaged in negotiations to resolve the political impasse with the Awami League (AL)—led by Sheikh Mujibur Rahman—and Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, leader of the Pakistan People's Party and the dominant political force in West Pakistan, the West Pakistani establishment continued to resist acknowledging the AL's electoral mandate. In Pakistan's first general elections that took place in 1970, the AL had secured an absolute majority—not only in East Pakistan but across the entire country. Instead of transferring power to the democratically elected majority and initiating a constitutional process, the military regime chose the path of violent repression.

On the night of March 25, 1971, the Pakistan Army launched a brutal and unprecedented attack on unarmed Bangalees in East Pakistan, seeking to crush the political movement and eliminate its leadership. Sheikh Mujibur Rahman was arrested from his residence at Dhanmondi 32 that night. The massacre triggered a period of apparent chaos and uncertainty as the political leadership of Bangladesh was left in disarray amid the full-scale military assault.

However, the widespread and spontaneous resistance from students, civilians, members of the army, EPR, and police across cities and strategic locations provided vital momentum. Within two weeks, the political leadership took a decisive initiative to formally lead the war and establish the Government of Bangladesh, a crucial step in organising the liberation movement.

However, it was not an easy task to act promptly and devise a plan to form a government, along with drafting the Proclamation of Independence, in the absence of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, the leader of the Awami League and the symbolic figure of the nation. His absence created confusion and internal divisions within the party, making leadership coordination even more difficult. The first step was to bring together the top AL leaders for discussions after March 26.

Despite these challenges, Tajuddin Ahmad, general secretary of the AL, managed to take charge. When he met then Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi in Delhi along with his associate Amirul Islam, an MLA, Tajuddin informed her that a provisional government had already been formed in Bangladesh. In response, Indira Gandhi assured full support from the Government of India for the Bangladesh movement.

Tajuddin then entrusted Amirul Islam with drafting a formal Proclamation of Independence. Notably, Amirul drew inspiration from the US Declaration of Independence. It is particularly significant as the US stance on the crisis influenced the tone and structure of the draft that was eventually accepted.

In the Laws Continuance Enforcement unprecedented non-cooperation movement led by Sheikh Mujibur Rahman from March 3 to March 25, 1971, following the Pakistani junta's suspension of the National Assembly session that was meant to draft a new constitution.

The core purpose of the Proclamation of Independence was to fulfil the legitimate right to self-determination of the people of Bangladesh, following Pakistan's History of the Creation of Bangladesh, Srinath Raghavan highlights a significant development that followed the Proclamation of Independence and the formation of the Bangladesh government. At the time, East Germany did not have formal diplomatic relations with New Delhi, although it had maintained trade missions in India since 1954. East Germany's stance on the crisis was influenced by its long-standing ambition to gain full diplomatic recognition from India. In the second week of April 1971, anticipating the Proclamation of Independence by the provisional Government of Bangladesh, the East German representative in Calcutta swiftly moved to establish contact with the Mujibnagar authorities, underscoring the international dimensions of that critical moment.

Legal experts consider the Proclamation of Independence as the wartime constitution of Bangladesh, which served as the guiding framework until the formal adoption of the national constitution on November 4, 1972. Acknowledging its historical and legal importance, the proclamation has been rightly incorporated into the Constitution of Bangladesh.

The emergence of a successor state from a post-colonial nation was a rare occurrence on the global stage after World War II. Bangladesh stands as a significant exception, having achieved independence following the disintegration of Pakistan. This path to statehood was powerfully affirmed by the historic speech of Tajuddin Ahmad, broadcast on Swadhin Bangla Betar Kendra on April 11, 1971, in which he declared, "Pakistan is dead and buried under a mountain of corpses"—a statement reportedly drafted by Rehman Sobhan and Amirul Islam.

The Proclamation of Independence was a timely and decisive act that not only guided the nation during the Liberation War, but also became a lasting beacon in the post-independence era. Beyond its legal standing, the proclamation justified the right to self-determination, addressed the human rights violations during the genocide, and laid a clear political direction for the people of Bangladesh—one that continues to resonate across time.

Order, dated April 10, 1971, Acting President Syed Nazrul Islam notably emphasised that the establishment of the sovereign and independent state of Bangladesh was a manifestation of the people's will. Accordingly, he exercised his authority to issue the Proclamation of Independence.

The people's aspiration for freedom in Bangladesh was crystallised during the 1970 general elections, shaped by the Six-Point Movement of 1966 and the mass uprising of 1969 against Ayub Khan's dictatorship. These were rooted in the broader experience of political and economic subjugation that East Pakistanis endured under what often resembled a colonial relationship with West Pakistan. This growing aspiration for self-determination culminated in the declaration of an unjust and treacherous war. It powerfully emphasised the principles of equality, human dignity, and social justice. In response to Pakistan's betrayal, despite ongoing discussions, the elected representatives of Bangladesh—the people's representatives, honour-bound by the public mandate and guided by the supreme will of the people—duly constituted themselves into a Constituent Assembly.

This proclamation served as the legal foundation during the 1971 Liberation War, facilitating international recognition and support, organising war efforts, providing shelter to approximately one crore refugees, and sustaining the nation's morale in its quest for freedom.

NOSHIN NAWAL

It's not every day that you open your morning newsfeed and find a Labour MP from Hampstead and Highgate wanted by the authorities—not in Westminster, but in Dhaka. Tulip Siddiq, niece of ousted Bangladesh Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina, darling of North London's progressive set, and former economic secretary to the Treasury, now finds herself tangled in a legal mess that smells suspiciously like a cross-border family drama mixed with post-dictatorship retribution.

A Dhaka court has issued an arrest warrant for Siddiq, accusing her—along with over 50 others, including her mother Sheikh Rehana and brother Radwan Mujib Siddiq—of illegally acquiring land in the diplomatic zone of the city. Not a bad postcode to inherit, one might think, but the allegations are less about location and more about symbolism. Because if you're wondering whether this is about one 7,200-square-foot plot, let me assure you: this is about political karma being served with a side of national catharsis.

To fully understand the implications, one must remember that Tulip Siddiq is not just a British MP. She is the British MP who embodies the soft power of the Bangladeshi ruling dynasty. A Western-educated, well-spoken, multicultural poster child for Labour's diversity credentials, she has long enjoyed the privileges of both proximity to power and distance from the consequences of it. While Sheikh Hasina tightened her grip on Bangladesh's democratic institutions with a precision that would make autocrats weep with envy, Siddiq remained largely unscathed in London, smiling her way through party conferences and ministerial posts. Her loyalty to her aunt was discreet but undeniable. She never bit the hand that buttered her family's legacy.

But Bangladesh is no longer playing the same game. Hasina is gone. The July uprising sent her packing; the student protesters did what international observers and decades of diplomatic side-eyes could not. And now, the country's interim regime—led, almost ironically, by Nobel laureate-turned-political-plumber Muhammad Yunus—is sifting through the mess. The Anti-Corruption Commission (ACC), armed with more paperwork than subtlety, is rolling out a fully fledged accountability crusade, and the Sheikh family is first on the chopping board. The arrest warrant for Tulip, though legally impotent due to the lack of a Bangladesh-UK extradition treaty, is politically potent.

Tulip Siddiq is not just a British MP, but a British MP who embodies the soft power of the Bangladeshi ruling dynasty.

It sends a message: the age of impunity is over. Or at least, that's the tagline. In reality, this is a high-stakes theatre of justice, a performance calibrated for both domestic rage and international headlines. Whether it leads to actual convictions or fizzles out in bureaucratic ambiguity remains to be seen. But what's certain is this: Tulip Siddiq is now a symbol—no longer just of multicultural Britain, but of the entangled mess that is globalised nepotism.

She, of course, denies everything, claims she never owned land in Bangladesh and that this is nothing more than a politically motivated smear campaign. And perhaps it is. One doesn't need to be a fan of the Sheikh dynasty to recognise that transitional justice often has the precision of a wrecking ball. But for someone who benefited from the very architecture of dynasty politics, Siddiq's sudden plea for distance and neutrality feels, shall we say, rich.

In the UK, the response has been relatively muted. Some murmurs about reputational risk, a resignation from her Treasury role in January to keep the scandal from distracting the government—how very noble. But one wonders if the British establishment will ever truly grapple with the awkward implications of having democratically-elected officials with familial ties to regimes accused of human rights abuses.

What's even more ironic is the timing. Britain, still recovering from its own post-Brexit identity crisis, now finds one of its MPs embroiled in a land-grabbing scandal halfway across the world. It's the kind of storyline that writes itself: former colony issues arrest warrant for the niece of a former dictator, who just so happens to be an MP in the imperial centre. Somewhere, a postcolonial studies professor is having a field day.

But let's not get too smug. Because this isn't just about one MP or one dynasty. This is about the consequences of letting familial loyalty trump democratic responsibility. About how diasporic elites often benefit from the best of both worlds—power at home, prestige abroad—and are held accountable in neither. It's about how justice, when delayed or denied for too long, begins to resemble vengeance when it finally arrives.

Tulip Siddiq might survive this scandal. She might stay comfortably nestled in her North London constituency, issuing carefully worded statements about injustice and dignity. But her political sheen is tarnished. The narrative of the polished, progressive MP coexists now with headlines about shady land deals and family empires.

And as Bangladesh hurdles towards its own reckoning—balancing vengeance and virtue, justice and spectacle—Tulip's story serves as a cautionary tale not just for politicians with powerful bloodlines, but for any democracy that lets power pass through the family tree like heirloom jewellery. Eventually, the tree is shaken. And sometimes, the flowers fall the hardest.

Aparna Sanyal and the burden of representation in South Asian literature

‘Instruments of Torture’ (Harper Collins India, 2024) is a compelling critique of the ways in which beauty standards, societal norms, and patriarchal control shape individuals’ lives

NAMRATA

Aparna Upadhyaya Sanyal’s Instruments of Torture is a powerful literary collection that delves into the psychological and societal torments individuals endure, particularly focusing on themes of beauty standards and the representation of women. Each story in the collection is named after a medieval torture device, serving as a metaphor for the emotional and societal pressures faced by the characters.

For instance, in “The Spanish Boot”, the protagonist, Poornima, grows up internalising the belief that a woman’s value is intrinsically Sanyal’s exploration of these themes aligns with broader discussions in South Asian literature that critique the role of beauty in determining a woman’s worth. Writers such as Ismat Chughtai, Kamala Das, and Jhumpa Lahiri have all engaged with these issues, portraying the ways in which women’s bodies become sites of control, admiration, and, sometimes even rebellion.

Ismat Chughtai’s Lihaaf (1942), though not directly about beauty standards, challenges the idea of a woman’s prescribed role in a patriarchal society. The protagonist, Begum Jaan, is married off to a wealthy man who shows no interest in her, leaving her to find solace in an unconventional women’s appearances are fetishised, whether through colonial exoticism or internalised cultural expectations.

Sanyal’s themes resonate with the works of artists and writers from around the world who have critically examined societal perceptions of women and beauty. Frida Kahlo, for instance, used her art to challenge traditional feminine beauty standards and the male gaze. In her self-portraits, Kahlo emphasised features like her monobrow and upper lip hair, embracing unconventional beauty norms and subverting societal expectations. Her painting, “My Nurse and I”, candidly portrays the complexities of breastfeeding, highlighting the often overlooked pain and disconnect associated with the experience.

Ana Mendieta’s Silueta Series also reflects on identity, femininity, and the societal constraints imposed on women’s bodies. Mendieta created female silhouettes in natural settings, expressing a deep connection between the female body and the earth. This work mirrors the way Sanyal’s stories reclaim the female experience, portraying pain and resilience in equal measure.

Contemporary artists Mickalene Thomas and Linder further explore feminine imagery and societal expectations. Thomas’s monumental portraits of Black women celebrate their strength and agency, blending personal and cultural narratives to challenge traditional representations. Linder’s post-punk photo collages dissect feminine images from soft porn and fashion photography, offering a critique of the roles and perceptions assigned to women.

In the South Asian literary tradition, beauty has long been a determining factor in women’s futures, especially in terms of marriage. The trope of the “dusky” or “dark-skinned” woman struggling for acceptance appears frequently in literature and cinema. From Rabindranath Tagore’s Chokher Bali (1903) to more contemporary works like Arundhati Roy’s The God of Small Things (1997), women’s appearances often dictate their societal standing.

Sanyal’s Instruments of Torture engages with this theme by exposing the oppressive beauty standards imposed on women from an early age. In “The Spanish Boot”, Poornima’s life is shaped by the pressure to maintain her looks, a reality that many South Asian women can relate to. In a region where fairness creams are still marketed aggressively and marriage proposals are often contingent on a woman’s complexion, Sanyal’s critique is particularly poignant.

Moreover, the idea of women’s bodies as battlegrounds is not new in South Asian literature. From Amrita Pritam’s Pinjar (1950), which deals with the Partition’s impact on women’s autonomy, to Mahasweta Devi’s Draupadi (1978), where a native woman is subjected to state violence, female bodies have long been sites of suffering and resistance. Sanyal extends this discourse by linking beauty standards to psychological torture, showing how internalised oppression can be just as damaging as external violence.

While Instruments of Torture focuses heavily on beauty standards, its commentary extends to other forms of societal oppression. Sanyal’s use of medieval torture devices as metaphors allows her to explore how outdated, yet persistent, structures continue to shape contemporary lives.

For instance, in South Asian societies, the caste system continues to dictate people’s opportunities and social mobility. Although not directly addressed in Instruments of Torture, the idea of rigid societal expectations forcing individuals into predefined roles aligns with the caste-based discrimination explored in Dalit literature. Writers like Bama (author of Karukku) and Perumal Murugan (One Part Woman) have similarly highlighted the ways in which societal expectations can become oppressive “instruments of torture”.

Sanyal’s work also speaks to the universal experience of bodily scrutiny, a theme that transcends geography. Whether through the lens of South Asian marriage markets or Western beauty industries, women are constantly subjected to impossible standards. By framing these struggles through the language of historical torture, Sanyal underscores their severity, making readers question whether so-called “normal” expectations are, in fact, a form of violence.

Aparna Sanyal’s Instruments of Torture is a compelling critique of the ways in which beauty standards, societal norms, and patriarchal control shape individuals’ lives. By drawing from historical torture devices, Sanyal forces readers to confront the brutality of these expectations. Her work aligns with global feminist discourse while remaining deeply rooted in South Asian literary traditions, making it a significant contribution to contemporary literature.

By examining Sanyal’s work alongside those of Chughtai, Das, Lahiri, Kahlo, Mendieta, and others, it becomes clear that the pressure of beauty and societal perceptions of women are pervasive across cultures. Artists and writers continue to challenge these norms, offering new ways of understanding identity, femininity, and resistance. Sanyal’s work, in particular, stands out for its sharp metaphors and unflinching critique, making it an essential text for discussions on gender, representation, and power in South Asia and beyond.

ties to her appearance. Her life revolves around maintaining her beauty, a notion instilled by her mother and reinforced by societal expectations. This narrative mirrors the experiences of many women who grapple with the relentless pressure to conform to idealised beauty standards. Similarly, in “The Rack”, Sanyal introduces a man subjected to medical interventions aimed at “curing” his dwarfism. His anguish highlights the societal pressure to conform to physical norms, underscoring the psychological toll of such coercion. These stories serve as sharp commentaries on the structures that shape our lives, often to the detriment of the most vulnerable.

relationship. Chughtai exposes how women are often reduced to their physical appeal and expected to conform to societal roles that do not necessarily serve them. Similarly, Kamala Das’s poetry frequently grapples with themes of bodily autonomy and the tension between societal expectations and personal agency.

Jhumpa Lahiri’s Interpreter of Maladies (1999) also provides a nuanced critique of gender roles, particularly in the South Asian diaspora. In the short story “Sexy”, a woman named Miranda becomes infatuated with a married Indian man who only sees her as an object of desire. Lahiri, much like Sanyal, interrogates the ways in which

A pantheon of parables

‘Fit for the Gods: Greek Mythology Reimagined’ (Vintage, 2023), edited by Jenn Northington and S. Zainab Williams, is a collection of classic myths with a twist

SABRINA FATMA AHMAD

Given that the newsfeed these days reads like Yuval Noah Harari on a psychedelic trip, it’s understandable that a brilliant show like Kaos (2024), with its modern depiction of the Greek mythology, complete with not-so-subtle jabs at unequal power structures, corporate greed, and inefficient bureaucracy, would not find enough viewer traction for Netflix to continue investing in it, whereas fluffy, feel-good shows like Bridgerton (2020) and Emily in Paris (2020) continue to go from strength to strength. Sometimes an escape from reality is just what the doctor ordered.

Sitting through Jeff Goldblum’s delicious portrayal of megalomania, however, whetted my appetite for the Greek stories in contemporary settings, and Providence threw a neat little anthology called Fit for the Gods my way.

Taking up the challenge of shedding the light on a greater diversity of writers, this collection offers 15 imaginative gems that tell those familiar stories in entirely unexpected ways. From modern contexts to fusions with traditions from other cultures, to experiments with form, there’s a little something for everyone.

“The Gorgon Confessionals” by Zoraida Córdova revisits the story of Medusa, framed as a reality podcast. Aside from the novelty of the conceit, this format also allows the writer to shift the focus of the myth from the bravery of the ‘hero’ Theseus who defeated the ‘monster’ Gorgon to the hypocrisy of the gods and goddesses that doubly victimised Medusa. S Zainab Williams herself takes a stab at the stories with “Dion and the Maenads”, re-imagining Dionysus reincarnated as a woman traipsing through Napa Valley, seeking for ways to irk the gods. “Tiresias” by Zeyn Joukhadar explores some of the struggles of trans people in a modern context. “The Furies Detective Agency” by Mia P. Manansala takes the film noir approach to the story of Oedipus. “The Ship of Thea” is a gender-bent story of the Argonauts, and a story about overcoming generational trauma. Susan Purr’s “Pickles for Mrs Pomme” is probably the most light-hearted story in the collection, framing Aphrodite as a lusty senior in a gated community, and a little knowledge of the pantheon and its tales goes a long way in enhancing the fun of this story.

A number of the stories fuse the Greco-Roman myths with other cultures. “Wild to Cove” by Sarah Gailey, written in the traditions of American folklore, tells the story of Thetis’ journey from wild girl to wife and mother of Achilles, and is an evocative interrogation of who and what is untameable. “Words from the Mountain” by

ILLUSTRATION: MAISHA SYEDA

Wen Wen Yang fuses Chinese lore with Greek to make a case for breaking patterns. “No Gods, No Kings” is Maya Deane’s incandescent chronicle to the role of the Amazons in the fall of the Titans. “Pescada” by Juliana Spink Mills puts Penelope, Ulysses and Circe in South America, a story about forbidden desire and repressed longings.

There are also a few exciting sci-fi entries with strong climate conscious themes, such as “Atlanta Hunts the Boar” by Valerie Valdes which is basically Fast and the Furious but with space-pod racing, and “Bastion in Spring” by Alyssia Cole, which tells the story of Persephone and Hades as a post-human story about a ravaged planet and two lonely AI’s. Jude Real’s “A Heart Inured to Suffering” puts Odysseus in your classic space-age horror trope. Marika Bailey’s “Trembling Aspen; Or to Shiver” is ostensibly about Apollo and Daphne, but cleverly mirrors the ecocide and terraforming perpetrated by white settlers in North America.

“The Eagles at the Edge of the World” by Taylor Rae is a standout piece of climate fiction, which chronicles the journey of the last two members of the Kumeyaay nation as they drift through the post-apocalyptic seas. The story features only passing references to “Troy”, making this the most fitting story to end on.

While some stories are more memorable than others, it is worth appreciating how these retellings are so inclusive and approachable. The tweaks range from gender to race to sexuality, but each new version adds nuance, complexity, and a new perspective to the themes of the original. Familiarity with the classic myths provides readers with fun little ‘aha’ moments of recognition, especially at some of the witty naming conventions, but you don’t have to be a mythology geek to enjoy Fit for the Gods.

Whether you’re looking to see your favorite stories through a new lens or for stories that defy conventions and which create their own rules, this one’s definitely worth a try.

Depleted MSC still eyeing DPL triumph

SPORTS REPORTER

Mohammedan Sporting Club will miss several of their top cricketers in the Super League phase of the ongoing Dhaka Premier League (DPL), but are still hopeful of becoming champions.

Mohammedan roped in several top players such as Tamim Iqbal, Mushfiqur Rahim, Mahmudullah, Towhid Hridoy and Taskin Ahmed in this year's tournament.

But as the Super League phase starts today, Mohammedan will be without many key players for different reasons.

Still, their manager Sazzad Ahmed Shipon is optimistic of winning their first DPL title since the 2009-10.

"Four of our players left to represent the national team... So, it's become difficult for us to form the playing XI," Shipon told reporters yesterday, a day before their match against Legends of Rupganj in Mirpur.

"The boys have the determination and target of finishing the tournament as champions," he added.

To bolster the depleted squad, MSC have roped in Mustafizur Rahman for the Super League phase.

Tigresses look to seal WORLD CUP BERTH

SPORTS REPORTER

Bangladesh national women's team will look to confirm their spot in the main event of the ICC Women's World Cup, scheduled to be held in India next year, when they face the West Indies in their penultimate qualifier at the LCCA Ground in Lahore today.

The Tigresses are currently in excellent form, having won all three of their matches so far to sit atop the six-team table.

Even if Bangladesh lose today's match, they will still have a chance to qualify as one of the two teams from the tournament. However, they then might need to beat hosts Pakistan -- the other unbeaten team in the tournament -- in their final game on April 19.

With the best net run rate in the tournament (1.494), Bangladesh could also qualify even if they lose both their remaining matches, provided their net run rate does not suffer a significant blow.

Before the tournament began, Bangladesh were aware that every match would be crucial. They have delivered accordingly, notching wins against lower-ranked teams Thailand, Ireland, and Scotland.

Their path to securing a second consecutive World Cup qualification has also been eased by the underwhelming performance of the West Indies, who have lost two of their three matches so far.

Despite the favorable qualification scenario, Bangladesh captain Nigar Sultana Joty -- currently the tournament's leading run-scorer with 235 runs in three innings -- remains focused on her team's game.

"We plan to go match by match. Yes, we're looking forward to the game, but we play as a team," Joty said following their 34-run win over Scotland on Tuesday.

"We need to concentrate on the things we've done well as a team. The way we've played in the last few games, we just want to continue that," added Joty, who has been thrilled with her side's batting performances throughout the qualifiers.

Bangladesh have posted two of their highest-ever totals in this format during the tournament -- 271 for three against Thailand and 276 for six against Scotland. They also successfully chased a 236-run target against Ireland -- their highest successful chase to date.

"Batting had been our most visible weakness over the past few years. Our bowlers performed well, but the batting often didn't click," she noted.

"But in this tournament, our batters have played wonderfully. They've been getting runs in the top-order and they've been very consistent."

Bangladesh have faced the West Indies four times in this format, winning just once and losing three. Their sole victory came earlier this year, when they beat the Caribbean side by 60 runs in St Kitts, boosting their direct qualification hopes -- only to fall short with a loss in the final game of the series.

This time, the Tigresses will be hoping for a different outcome.

Foreign flavour in U-19 camp after Hamza's debut

SPORTS REPORTER

Following Sheffield United midfielder Hamza Choudhury's debut for Bangladesh against India last month, interest among expatriate footballers in representing the national team has seen a notable rise. Canada-based midfielder Shamit Shome has already expressed his desire to play for Bangladesh.

While Denmark-based Jamal Bhuiyan blazed the trail over a decade ago, Hamza's recent appearance for the senior national team seems to have reignited enthusiasm among foreign-born players, including those at the youth level.

Head coach Golam Rabbani Choton has named three foreign-based players -- Abdul Kadir (Italy), Elman Matin (UK), and Farzad Aftab (USA) -- in the 35-member preliminary squad of the Bangladesh U-19 football team, who are set to start their preparations at Shams Ul Huda Football Academy in Jashore today for next month's SAFF U-19 Championship.

These players were not selected solely based on their overseas background. Instead, they underwent rigorous training alongside the BFF Elite Academy players, who recently completed the first phase of the Bangladesh Championship League.

The exclusion of UAE-based goalkeeper Uzeayear Chowdhury from the preliminary squad underscores that expatriate status alone does not secure a spot on the team.

Under coach Choton's guidance, most players -- except two, each from BKSP and Bashundhara Kings -- arrived at the academy in Jashore last night to begin nearly two weeks of training. The team will then return to Dhaka for final preparations at the BKSP artificial turf before departing for India on May 6.

Among the expatriates, Abdul Kadir has participated in various youth tournaments in Italy and currently plays for Serie D club Fermana. He prefers to play as a right winger or midfielder and claims to have recorded eight goals and two assists.

Both Matin and Aftab have also competed in different youth-level tournaments in the UK and the USA.

"They joined the Elite Academy players for the Bangladesh Championship League training in the first week of this month. They looked good in training," coach Choton told The Daily Star after a session at the Dhanmondi Club ground on Tuesday.

"I'll be able to assess them more thoroughly when they train alongside players from the Bangladesh Premier League and Bangladesh Championship League during the residential camp," Choton added. He plans to finalise a 23-member squad after training at BKSP's artificial turf.

Bangladesh, the defending champions of the 2024 SAFF U-20 Championship, have been drawn in Group A alongside Maldives and Bhutan. Group B comprises hosts India, Nepal, and Sri Lanka. The top two teams from each group will advance to the semifinals of the tournament, scheduled to be held in India from May 9 to 18.

A rivalry on its last legs

ASHFAQ-UL-ALAM

Bangladesh's two-Test series against Zimbabwe is set to commence in Sylhet on Sunday at a time when fan interest on any sort of cricketing engagement between these two sides is arguably at an all-time low.

The days when the entire country took notice of a Bangladesh-Zimbabwe series are long gone. The level of interest has dipped so much that the Bangladesh Cricket Board (BCB) has not been able to find a broadcaster for the series at the time this report was filed.

Even though this rivalry has degraded to such an extent that calling it a rivalry feels like a stretch, Zimbabwe, as opponents, have played an important role in Bangladesh's cricketing journey.

In Bangladesh's initial decades as a cricketing nation, it was always playing catch up with Zimbabwe, trying to follow in the footsteps of their African counterparts.

But as the Tigers gained the upper hand, every match against Zimbabwe has become an opportunity to improve their overall record in international cricket, and if one takes the Zimbabwe matches out of the equation, Bangladesh's poor record becomes even poorer, especially in Tests.

Evolution of a rivalry Bangladesh's dynamic with Zimbabwe in cricket has changed in every decade.

In the 1980s, when Bangladesh were just starting out, Zimbabwe were a top side at the Associate level, having won the ICC Trophy three consecutive times in 1982, 86 and 90.

In the following decade, the Tigers first ventured into the big leagues, having won the ICC Trophy in 1997 to qualify for the

Bangladesh players run for joy following their 226-run win against Zimbabwe in the first of a two-match Test series against Zimbabwe -- their first ever victory in the format. PHOTO: AFP FILE

World Cup the following year and earning their Test status in 2000 -- eight years after Zimbabwe had entered the Test arena.

In the noughties, Zimbabwe were Bangladesh's worthy adversaries, a tough opponent but not a team that can't be beaten, until the mass exodus of top Zimbabwean cricketers in protest of government interference which preceded Bangladesh's historic maiden Test and series win in 2005.

Soon after that defeat, began Zimbabwe's self-imposed six-year sabbatical from Tests that same year, after which Bangladesh gained the upper hand.

Since the 2010s, the Tigers have mostly dominated the African side with some hiccups along the way, and the scale of the dominance has grown larger with time, especially in Tests.

Bangladesh have won seven out of the last eight Tests they have played against the Zimbabweans, with the only defeat coming in Sylhet in November 2018.

With these victories, the Tigers stamped their authority over Zimbabwe in the five-day format and have also somewhat improved their sorry stats in the format.

Bangladesh in Tests with and without Zimbabwe

Barring Afghanistan and Ireland, among teams that are still new to the Test arena, Bangladesh and Zimbabwe are the worst in the format by a stretch.

Overall, Bangladesh's win percentage in the format is just 14.67, only better than Zimbabwe's 10.74 percent.

But when it comes to draws and losses, Bangladesh have done worse than Zimbabwe overall as the Tigers have drawn 12 percent of their matches to Zimbabwe's 24.79 and have lost 73.33 percent games to Zimbabwe's 64.46.

However, Bangladesh's stats have hugely benefited from the 18 Tests they have played against Zimbabwe as without those matches, they are far worse off in the format.

Bangladesh have won eight, lost seven and drawn three Tests against Zimbabwe so far. If one takes away the wins against Zimbabwe, the Tigers' win percentage in Tests dips to 10.61 and draw percentage becomes 11.36.

A chance to stat-pad?

With the forthcoming series not even being a part of the ICC Test Championship, the only benefit Bangladesh can get out of it is to win both games and slightly improve their overall stats.

However, if Bangladesh slip up against a team that has not won a Test since 2021, it would cause much alarm and maybe spice up an otherwise stale rivalry.

Onana faces date with destiny

AFP,London

Andre Onana faces a potentially make-or-break match for his Manchester United career against Lyon in the Europa League on Thursday as the English giants battle to keep their season alive.

The Cameroon international goalkeeper made himself the main talking point ahead of the first leg of the quarter-final in France, which ended in a 2-2 draw, boldly claiming United were "way better" than their opponents.

That prompted a salty reply from former United midfielder Nemanja Matic, now with Lyon, who labelled him "one of the worst goalkeepers in Manchester United's history".

Onana was given a hostile reception by fans in France and his words came back to haunt him when he was at fault for both of the goals United conceded.

United manager Ruben Amorim dropped him for Sunday's trip to Newcastle, bringing in back-up goalkeeper Altay Bayindir, but the game ended in a 4-1 defeat, with the Turkey international at fault for the fourth goal.

Amorim now has a potentially season-defining decision to make -- does he bring Onana back in or pick Bayindir again?

The stakes are high. Defeat at Old Trafford would effectively end United's season, with nothing left to play for in the Premier League.

Victory would keep them on track to win the Europa League, which would be a passport into the lucrative Champions League for next season.

United, with Erik ten Hag then at the helm, paid around £47 million ($62 million) to sign Onana from Inter Milan in 2023 as a replacement for David de Gea.

The 29-year-old has shown flashes of brilliance but has lacked consistency and has developed an unwanted reputation as a calamity keeper.

According to Opta figures from before the latest round of matches, since the start of last season no Premier League goalkeeper had made more errors leading to goals in all competitions than Onana (8).

Amorim still has a chance to end United's turbulent campaign with a European trophy, which could prove transformative as he rebuilds.

But whether Onana remains central to his plans both in the short term and the long term remains to be seen.

- Dortmund snapped Barcelona's unbeaten streak across all competitions in 2025. In this period, The Catalans won 20 matches and drew four before losing at Dortmund.

- Serhou Guirassy's 13 Champions League goals this season is the most ever by an African player in a single campaign in the competition. He scored more goals than any other Dortmund player in a single edition of the Champions League, beating Robert Lewandowski and Erling Haaland's joint record (10).

- Villa's debut Champions League campaign ended with eight wins from 12 games (D1 L3) -- the joint-most wins for a side in their first-ever appearance in the competition alongside Lazio and Valencia in 1999-00.

- PSG failed to win a Champions League game despite leading by 2+ goals for the first time since March 2001 (4-3 loss vs Deportivo de La Coruña), having won 56 successive matches before the loss at Villa.

Borussia Dortmund's Guinean forward Serhou Guirassy celebrates one of his three goals against Barcelona during a 3-1 win in their UEFA Champions League quarterfinal second leg fixture in Dortmund on Tuesday. Despite the Guinean's hat-trick, Barcelona advanced to the semifinals of the competition for the first time in six years with a 5-3 aggregate victory. PHOTO: REUTERS

Arson attack on Ananda Shobhajatra artist's home

4 suspects held

STAR REPORT

Four people were arrested over setting fire to the Manikganj house of artist Manabendra Ghosh, who made the tiger motif for the Borsho Boron Ananda Shobhajatra, yesterday.

SM Aman Ullah, officer-in-charge of Manikganj Sadar Police Station, said Manabendra filed a case against unidentified people. "We have already arrested four persons. Drive continues to arrest the others."

The suspects are Al Amin Tomal, 22, finance secretary of banned Chhatra League of Manikganj Sadar upazila unit, and Mainuddin Ahmed Pias, 22, joint secretary of the unit, Babul Hossain, 54, general secretary of ward-3 unit of Awami League, and Meer Maruf, 21, said police.

Manabendra told The Daily Star, "The day before Pahela Baishakh, a [Facebook] page called 'Rajya Sabha' spread misleading information that I made the motif of deposed prime

UN PEACEKEEPING Trump admin seeks to scrap funding

REUTERS, Washington

The White House budget office has proposed eliminating funding for United Nations peacekeeping missions, citing failures by operations in Mali, Lebanon and Democratic Republic of Congo, according to internal planning documents seen by Reuters.

Washington is the UN's largest contributor - with China second - accounting for 22 percent of the $3.7 billion core regular UN budget and 27 percent of the $5.6 billion peacekeeping budget. These payments are mandatory.

The proposed peacekeeping cuts are included in a so-called "Passback," the response by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) to State Department funding requests for the upcoming fiscal year, which begins on October 1. The overall plan wants to slash the State Department budget by about half.

The new budget must be approved by Congress, and lawmakers could

Efforts to revive Gaza truce stall

Hamas rejects calls to disarm; 13 more Palestinians killed in Israeli strikes

REUTERS, Jerusalem

Israeli troops will remain in the buffer zones they have created in Gaza even after any settlement to end the war, Defence Minister Israel Katz said yesterday, as efforts to revive a ceasefire agreement faltered.

Since resuming their operation last month, Israeli forces have carved out a broad "security zone" extending deep into Gaza and squeezing more than 2 million Palestinians into ever smaller areas in the south and along the coastline.

"Unlike in the past, the IDF is not evacuating areas that have been cleared and seized," Katz said in a statement following a meeting with military commanders, adding that "tens of percent" of Gaza had been added to the zone.

"The IDF will remain in the security zones as a buffer between the enemy and the communities in any temporary or permanent situation in Gaza - as in Lebanon and Syria."

Hamas has repeatedly described calls to disarm as a red line it will not cross and has said Israeli troops must withdraw from Gaza under any permanent ceasefire.

In southern Gaza alone, Israeli forces have seized about 20 percent of the enclave's territory, taking control of the border city of Rafah and pushing inland up to the so-called "Morag corridor" that runs from the eastern edge of Gaza to the Mediterranean Sea between Rafah and the city of Khan Younis.

Yesterday, Palestinian medical authorities said an airstrike killed 10 people, including Fatema Hassouna, a well-known writer and photographer who had documented the war. A strike on another house further north killed three, they said.

Medical charity MSF said Gaza had become a "mass grave" with humanitarian groups struggling to provide aid. "We are witnessing in real time the destruction and forced displacement of the entire population in Gaza," Amande Bazerolle, MSF's emergency coordinator in Gaza said in a statement.

Katz also said Israel, which has blocked the delivery of aid supplies into the territory, was creating infrastructure to allow distribution through civilian companies at a later date. But he said the blockade on aid would remain in place.

He said Israel would push forward with a plan to allow Gaza civilians who wished to leave the enclave to do so, although it remains unclear which countries would be willing to accept large numbers of Palestinians.

Mujibnagar Day today

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Today is the historic Mujibnagar Day, the day Bangladesh's first government took oath in 1971 amidst the Liberation War.

The official announcement, known as the Proclamation of Independence, stated that the government's objective was to ensure equality, human dignity and social justice for the people of Bangladesh.

The Proclamation of Independence mentioned that the "order shall be deemed to have come into effect" on March 26, 1971.

It served as the Constitution of Bangladesh from March 26, 1971 to December 16, 1972.

Senior Awami League leaders assembled at Baidyanath Tala, Meherpur, on April 17, 1971, to form the provisional government of independent Bangladesh, in the absence of Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman who was in prison in Pakistan.

Bangabandhu was declared the first President of the People's Republic of Bangladesh, and Vice-President Syed Nazrul Islam became the acting president.

Protest rages at Kuet

Students say VC must go

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Khulna

Students at Khulna University of Engineering & Technology (Kuet) continued their protest yesterday, pressing ahead with their one-point demand -- the immediate resignation of Vice-Chancellor Prof Mohammad Mashud.

The agitating students accused the VC of failing to ensure campus security and acting against student welfare in the wake of the February 18 clash that left at least 40 students injured.

Academic activities at Kuet have remained suspended since the violent clash between activists of Jatiyatabadi Chhatra Dal and another group of students under the banner of 'general students', over the banning of student politics on campus. Kuet was declared closed indefinitely on February 25.

Around 11:00am yesterday, students brought out a procession from the "Durbar Bangla"

BDR carnage probe report likely by June: commission

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The investigation into the 2009 BDR (now Border Guard Bangladesh) carnage is progressing in full swing and a report may be submitted by June, said the independent commission set up for the probe.

The Chief Adviser's Press Wing disclosed the matter in a press release yesterday.

Members of the probe commission briefed the chief adviser on the progress of the investigation during a meeting held at the state guesthouse Jamuna.

"We are communicating with various stakeholders. As the incident occurred 16 years ago, reaching out to some of them is taking time. Many of the accused are currently abroad, and we are coordinating with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to trace them," said Maj Gen (ret'd) ALM

Provide info on wilful loan defaulters every 3 months

BB asks banks

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Bangladesh Bank yesterday instructed banks to furnish detailed information about wilful loan defaulters.

The central bank issued a notice stating that lenders must submit detailed information on the wilful defaulters to its Credit Information Bureau (CIB) every three months.

It also stated that it is mandatory to include the names, identities, and all relevant details of such defaulters.

In March last year, the banking regulator issued a similar notice, but the new one further refines the reporting process regarding the defaulters.

As per the new notice, once a bank identifies
