Tajuddin Ahmad was a statesman

"This award is not just a recognition. It is part of our national heritage. Remembering Tajuddin Ahmad means remembering our responsibility to the country," he said.

The VC also spoke about major events in the country's history, and warned against using these events for political gain. "We will not allow this kind of distortion, even in our limited capacity," he said.

Mohammad Azam, director general of Bangla Academy, delivered the memorial lecture titled "Tajuddin Ahmad er Diary: Oitihashikota O Rajnoitikota".

He described Tajuddin as a realist and practical thinker whose political views were shaped more by real-life experiences than by ideology or theory.

"He did not believe in imposing abstract ideas. He worked with what existed and tried to improve it. He wanted the institutions and structures left behind by the colonial system to become more mature and effective," Azam said.

He also said Tajuddin sought financial transparency and proper responsibility in state affairs.

Tajuddin could be seen as modern and liberal in the Western sense, but not in a purely Western ideological way, said Azam. "Instead of copying Western models, he believed in learning from our own lived experiences. That's why we cannot call him a Western-style liberal humanist."

"Tajuddin's diary is a rare and honest account of Bangladesh's political journey. It encourages people to rethink older, rigid views of history," he added.

Sharmin Ahmad, daughter of Tajuddin Ahmad and founder of the trust fund, said, "Tajuddin Ahmad is not the leader of any one party. During a turbulent, unstable, and extremely challenging -- yet profoundly beautiful -- time, when the nation was united, he played a key role in the Liberation War. He is a national asset."

"Because of our political narrow-mindedness, we have sidelined him. But darkness cannot suppress light for long," she said.

"Tajuddin Ahmad didn't belong to the Awami League alone -- he belonged to the entire nation. He was a statesman beyond party lines."

"He [Tajuddin] used to say that there are many who may not support our party but love the country -- they, too, are freedom fighters. In that way, people from all backgrounds and beliefs joined together, shoulder to shoulder, to turn the Liberation War into a people's movement -- a spark that led to our victory," she also said.

DU Treasurer Prof Jahangir Alam Chowdhury and Dr Sazzad Siddiqui, acting chairman and associate professor of the Peace and Conflict Studies Department, also spoke at the event.

A total of seven DU students received awards at the event.

Over 4,000 cases pending

Around 16,000 accused traffickers have been arrested, and 662 cases have been resolved. Additionally, 1,079 new cases were filed, and five traffickers have received life sentences under the existing law, he said.

Bernd Spanier, chargé d'affaires of the EU Delegation to Bangladesh, expressed concern that despite numerous trafficking cases being filed in the country, only a few have led to convictions.

"Behind every person who has returned home lies a long line of others still trapped in the shadows of traffickers," he said. "Trafficking thrives when governments are weak, migration is unsafe, and opportunities are scarce. Traffickers exploit that despair."

According to IOM data presented at the event, over 9,000 Bangladeshis crossed the Mediterranean to Italy in the first half of 2025, bringing the total since 2009 to over 90,000.

Many of these migrants, aged between 14 and 35, were lured by false promises of employment.

A significant number ended up in Libyan camps, where they were subjected to extortion and torture. As a result, Bangladesh is now one of the top countries for irregular migration to Europe.

Additional DIG of Police Ashiq Saeed said law enforcement agencies remain active in counter-trafficking efforts, with many traffickers already arrested and others being pursued internationally through Interpol.

Ikratul Habib of the Criminal Investigation Department identified Khulna as a trafficking hotspot due to its economic vulnerability and proximity to border districts like Jhenaidah, Meherpur, and Chuadanga.

Abul Hasnat, deputy secretary of the law ministry, said in many cases, victims are deceived by people close to them.

Lance Bono, chief of mission of IOM Bangladesh, pointed out the disproportionate impact of trafficking on women and children.

Sujin Kong, deputy country director of the Korea International Cooperation Agency (KOICA), described trafficking as one of the most serious forms of crime. He said Bangladesh remains one of the major source countries for human trafficking.

The event began with a welcome speech by Jasim Uddin Khan, joint secretary of the home ministry.

Md Asad Ullah Chowdhury from the Special Branch's Immigration Unit also attended the programme.

Touhid calls for ceasefire in Gaza

Touhid urged the international community to begin implementing the two-state solution without delay, emphasising the urgency to uphold international laws, humanitarian principles, and the UN Charter.

He warned that peace in the Middle East cannot be achieved without justice for the Palestinian people and reiterated Bangladesh's firm position in support of the two-state solution.

"More than 58,000 Palestinians have lost their lives and many more have been injured, most of them women and children," he said. "Schools, hospitals, and aid camps are under attack with countless bodies lying beneath rubble in Gaza."

Touhid emphasised that the implementation of the two-state solution is "the only viable and internationally recognised path forward, based on international law, relevant UN resolutions, and the aspirations of the people of Palestine."

The three-day ministerial conference, jointly convened by France and Saudi Arabia, has brought together representatives from 118 countries, aiming to chart a way forward for lasting peace in the Middle East by advancing the two-state solution and addressing the ongoing humanitarian crisis in Gaza.

The adviser also warned against Israel's continued expansion of illegal settlements and erosion of Palestinian presence in East Jerusalem.

Referring to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) issued on July 19, 2024, Touhid called for full compliance with international law and an end to Israel's unlawful occupation.

He strongly condemned the use of starvation as a method of warfare in Gaza.

"We stand ready to join any UN-led efforts for rebuilding Gaza by deploying personnel to support humanitarian and future reconstruction plans," he said.

Touhid reiterated Bangladesh's longstanding constitutional commitment to support oppressed peoples in their struggle for self-determination.

Thermal Power Plant (742 hectares), Khan Jahan Ali Airport (255 hectares), and the Khulna-Mongla Railway (57 hectares). Additional land was taken for technical institutes, fire stations, and police training centres.

Private industries have also changed the landscape. Along the 12-kilometre Khulna-Mongla highway stretch, over 550 hectares of farmland have been used for factories, LPG plants, fish depots, and solar power plants. Landowners, tempted by high prices, sold their fields, while day labourers and sharecroppers who depended on the land lost their jobs.

Amrito Lal Sarkar, a land seller near a solar power plant, said, "I sold my land to a private industry, but around 300 farmers used to cultivate paddy there. Many were day labourers -- they are now jobless."

Adding to the crisis, river erosion from the Pashur and Bogura rivers has swallowed at least 202 hectares of farmland over the last 30 years.

Rampal's upazila agriculture officer, Waliul Islam, claimed that although land area has decreased, initiatives like crop intensification and improved seed varieties have helped maintain overall output.

However, many experts and environmentalists disagree.

Govt to hike police

For instance, a constable on duty in the capital said he has been in the force for nine years.

"Currently, I receive a risk allowance of Tk 1,800. Once the initiative is implemented, I will get Tk 2,160 -- just Tk 360 more," he said.

However, officials who have served five years will benefit more.

Talking with this newspaper, an SI working in the Dhaka Metropolitan Police said he is now receiving a Tk 2,700 risk allowance.

"Once the new allowance rates take effect, I will receive Tk 3,840, which is an immediate increase of Tk 1,340," said the SI.

An ASI who has been in service for 19 years said, "I currently get Tk 3,200. With the new system, it will rise to Tk 3,840."

"But after four more months, when I complete 20 years, it will increase further to Tk 4,560," he added.

the charges pressed by the prosecution, which include murder, attempted murder, abetment, complicity, and command responsibility against crimes against humanity.

Sayed was shot dead on July 16 last year in Rangpur during a student-led protest against the quota system in government jobs. The defiance he showed against oppression before his death turned the protests into a mass uprising that eventually toppled Sheikh Hasina's regime on August 5 last year.

The accused in jail are former university proctor Shariful Islam, assistant registrar Rafiul Hasan Rasel, staff member Anwar Parvez, assistant sub-inspector Amir Hossain, constable Sujan Chandra Roy, and Bangladesh Chhatra League leader Imran Chowdhury Akash. At least 24 accused are absconding.

Many were small farmers or labourers who depended entirely on agriculture for survival. The absence of proper rehabilitation or alternative employment has led to rising unemployment, economic distress, and urban migration.

Farmland in Bagerhat, a predominantly agriculture-based district, is shrinking rapidly due to industrialisation and infrastructure development. As a result, thousands of farmers' livelihoods are under threat.

Data from the Department of Agricultural Extension show Bagerhat lost over 27,000 hectares of arable land in the past decade. In the 2014-15 fiscal year, the district had 149,254 hectares of cultivable land, which fell to 122,231 hectares by 2024-

25. Total cropland shrank from 212,472 hectares to 160,861 hectares.

Land once used for rice, vegetables, and other staple crops has increasingly been taken over by industries, housing projects, roads, and government infrastructure. Non-agricultural land use jumped from 16,564 hectares to 43,884 hectares in ten years.

In Rampal alone, at least 2,100 hectares of agricultural land have been converted to industrial or infrastructural sites in the last 25 years, pushing many farmers to migrate to cities for work. Nearly 1,214 hectares were acquired in the past three decades for government projects, including the Rampal

Thermal Power Plant (742 hectares), Khan Jahan Ali Airport (255 hectares), and the Khulna-Mongla Railway (57 hectares). Additional land was taken for technical institutes, fire stations, and police training centres.

Private industries have also changed the landscape. Along the 12-kilometre Khulna-Mongla highway stretch, over 550 hectares of farmland have been used for factories, LPG plants, fish depots, and solar power plants. Landowners, tempted by high prices, sold their fields, while day labourers and sharecroppers who depended on the land lost their jobs.

Rampal's upazila agriculture officer, Waliul Islam, claimed that although land area has decreased, initiatives like crop intensification and improved seed varieties have helped maintain overall output.

However, many experts and environmentalists disagree.

"Killing agriculture for industrial gain is a dangerous path," said Kudrat-e-Khuda, convener of the Khulna Environmental Protection Forum. "Land development policies strictly prohibit establishing industries on farmland. Yet, in Rampal, industrialisation continues unchecked."

Md Motaher Hossain, deputy director of the Bagerhat Agricultural Extension Department, told The Daily Star, "Agriculture is the backbone of our economy and culture. While we need industries, it must not come at the cost of destroying our farmlands. Agriculture is our lifeline; we cannot afford to lose it."
