An earnest appeal to preserve the Sundarbans

AISHWARYA RAIHAN

Bhumi Gallery in Lalmatia is hosting a five-day group art exhibition titled Aranyarekha, featuring 12 Bangladeshi artists whose works stem from a workshop in the Sundarbans. The inauguration was graced by Prof Mohammad Eunus, Prof Dr Md Anwarul Islam, and bird specialist Inam Al Haque.

Adyapanto, an artists' collective formed in 2019, recently held an art camp in the Sundarbans, sponsored by Dr Anwarul Islam and Inam Al Haque. Inspired by the mangrove forest, the artists produced captivating works.

Md Robiul Islam's large, translucent watercolours soothe both heart and eyes. Farzana Rahman Bobby created monotype prints inspired by mangrove roots, some dark, others joyous. Upoma Das Trina's striking blue cyanotype manipulation depicts herons, trees, boats, and waterbodies, evoking Hans Andersen's fairytale.

Shakti Noman crafted wooden sculptures of Sundari tree roots alongside acrylic canal paintings. Monjur Rashid painted splendid birds, while Ishrat Jahan portrayed warm-toned leaves with cheerful vibrancy. Kanak Aditya's minimalistic black-and-white painting stood apart.

Zemrina Haque offered vibrant small landscapes. Mamun Hossain used watercolour splatters and crisp ink lines to imagine the Sundarbans uniquely. Couple Morsena Rahman Rupa and Md Zahid Hossain filled canvases with deep blue hues; Rupa's baby Kaani Bawk stood out.

Nargis Akter Punam painted the majestic Royal Bengal Tiger, likening them to cacti—admired yet unapproachable—warning their numbers dwindle due to neglect.

Running from August 16 to 22, Aranyarekha celebrates the Sundarbans' beauty while urging preservation of our national treasure and vital greenery.

Govt to ensure higher standards in grant-funded films: Mahfuj Alam

Information and Broadcasting Adviser Md Mahfuj Alam has affirmed that the government will provide full support to enhance the quality of films produced with state funding. While handing over the first instalment of grants to producers of nominated full-length and short films at the secretariat yesterday, he announced that a workshop featuring filmmaking experts will soon be organised to help improve standards.

The adviser stated that this year's selection process was transparent, and urged producers to complete films on time. He added that all films will be preserved in the Bangladesh Film Archive. This year, 12 feature films and 20 short films have received Tk 1.80 crore and Tk 1.20 crore respectively.

‘Coke Studio Bangla’ Season 3 returns

Coke Studio Bangla has officially announced that it will resume on August 23, continuing the lineup of Season 3. The announcement follows a teaser earlier this week from Shayan Chowdhury Arnob, who hinted at the platform's next release.

Season 3 has already gained wide acclaim with three songs, the latest being a new interpretation of Warfaze's classic Obak Bhalobasha. With more tracks to follow, the season promises to showcase a mix of celebrated artistes and fresh talent, reflecting Coke Studio Bangla's vision of blending tradition with contemporary sound.

Shakib Khan confirms ‘Soldier’ for December release

Shakib Khan has confirmed that his upcoming film Soldier, directed by debutant Sakib Fahad, will release this December. Speaking from the United States, where he has been vacationing with actress Shobnom Bubly and their son Shehzad Khan Veer.

The megastar said, “This time I want to bring a story-driven film.” Rumours suggest he will play a former intelligence officer, with casting details yet to be announced. Shooting is scheduled to begin next month.

Recently, Shakib faced criticism over a Facebook post on Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman's death anniversary, which he clarified carried no political intent. With Soldier now confirmed, fans anticipate a new dimension to his career through a film focused on duty, personal conflict, and politics.

Charges framed against ex-MP

opening statements.

Prosecutors earlier said 29 people were killed in Ashulia during the uprising, but the current charges relate to one protester killed on August 4 last year and six others the next day.

In the latter incident, five bodies and one injured person were reportedly set ablaze inside a police van.

CHANKHARPOOL CASE

Two more prosecution witnesses yesterday made statements in the case filed over crimes against humanity committed during the killing of six people in Chankharpool on August 5 last year.

With their testimony, a total of eight prosecution witnesses have so far testified in the case at the International Crimes Tribunal-1.

Witness Rahat Hawlader broke down in tears seeing a video clip played in court and cried, “Sir, this man is my beloved brother!”

Another clip showed a policeman firing from a flyover into a crowd, moments before a man collapsed. Rahat, weeping, shouted again, “Sir, this is constable Sujon. He killed my brother, Rakib Hossain Hawlader!”

Rakib's father, Jahangir Hawlader, the other witness, rushed to the stand to console his son as tears streamed down his own face.

Jahangir said his son worked at a plastic factory in the city's Chawkbazar area. Around 1:00pm on the day of the incident, Rakib left the factory and joined the protest at Chankharpool, where he was shot dead by police.

He alleged that his son was killed under directives from former DMP commissioner Habibur Rahman, former joint commissioner Sudip Kumar Chakraborty, and in the presence and supervision of former additional deputy commissioner Shah Alam Mohammad Akhtarul Islam, former assistant commissioner (Ramna zone) Mohammad Imrul, and former inspector (operations) of Shahbagh Police Station Arshad Hossain.

He said the fatal shots were fired by former constables Sujon Hossain, Imaz Hossain, and Nasirul Islam.

He demanded justice and exemplary punishment for those responsible for his son's death.

Arshad, Sujon, Imaz, and Nasirul, who are in custody, were present during the hearing, while the rest, including Habibur, remain absconding.

Defence lawyers, including the state defence counsel representing the four absconding accused, cross examined the witnesses.

The tribunal adjourned further witness testimony until September 3.

Also at the briefing, Alam said the government has planned three international conferences with the aim of bringing the Rohingya crisis to the forefront of international discussions.

The interim government is working with utmost importance on the Rohingya issue, he said.

The first of the three conferences is scheduled to take place in Cox's Bazar from August 24 to 26.

Representatives from the United Nations and around 40 countries are expected to attend the conference, with attendance from Yunus expected on the second day.

The conference is being held in Cox's Bazar so that the victims of mass atrocities can directly share their experiences with global representatives, he said.

“It is difficult for the voices of the Rohingya community to be heard in the international arena.”

On the opening day, several Rohingya survivors will recount their experiences of persecution at the conference.

The second session of the first day of the conference will focus on the sharp decline in humanitarian assistance for the Rohingyas, with a view to increasing the volume of aid.

The third session will address justice for the atrocities committed against the Rohingyas, while the fourth session will discuss a roadmap for an acceptable solution to the Rohingya crisis.

However, the largest conference on the Rohingya crisis will take place at the United Nations on September 30, with participation from 170 countries.

Another conference is being planned in Doha, Qatar.

deny him a second White House term.

A trial judge had ordered the penalty in February 2024 after finding that Trump fraudulently overstated his wealth and the value of his properties to bolster his family business.

Trump denied wrongdoing, and his lawyers argued that any errors in reporting his fortune to his lenders and business partners were irrelevant because none was harmed.

Four judges on the five-member appeals court voted to let the fraud finding stand, but all found problems in the judge's handling of the case and two would have ordered a new trial.

A fifth judge would have dismissed the case altogether, and all five judges would have voided the payout. There was no majority opinion.

include former chief justice Surendra Kumar Sinha, former ICT chairman Justice Nizamul Huq, ex-law minister Shafique Ahmed, and former state minister for law Qamrul Islam.

Former ICT judge justice ATM Fazle Kabir, former ICT investigator Helal Uddin, former ICT chief prosecutor Syed Haider Ali, ex-prosecutor Rana Dasgupta, former chief of the ICT investigation agency Md Sanaul Haque, and former Pirojpur lawmaker AKM Awal alias Saidur Rahman.

The others are 10 to 15 then leaders and activists of Pirojpur district Awami League, Jubo League and Chhatra League, listed as unidentified accused.

In the complaint, Bali claimed that in July-August 2010, ICT investigator Helal interrogated him at a local school regarding the killing of his brother Bisha Bali during the 1971 Liberation War.

“I told him the truth, but Helal tried to force me to name Sayedee along with the real killers and give testimony against Sayedee before the tribunal.

“When I refused, saying Sayedee was in no way involved in the murder of my brother, he started physically assaulting me to give false testimony,” Bali wrote.

He alleged that Helal, along with local Awami League leaders including former MP Awal and former Pirojpur mayor Habibur Rahman Malek, repeatedly threatened and beat him for declining to give false testimony.

“They warned me that if I didn't agree to testify as instructed, the next day would be my last,” the complaint read. Bali said he went into hiding for months to save his life.

Later, he said, Sayedee's son Masud Sayedee approached him and requested him to testify in favour of Sayedee to reveal the truth. “I agreed and came to Dhaka on November 3, 2012 and contacted Masud Sayedee,” Bali said.

On November 5, while being taken to the tribunal by defence counsel Mizanul Islam in his car, Bali alleged he was intercepted near the ICT gate by plainclothesmen and police officers. “They dragged me out of the car, beat me, blindfolded me, and took me away in a white pickup,” he wrote.

He alleged he was held in a dark room for nearly two months and subjected to severe physical and psychological torture, including electric shocks to his private parts to force him to give statement against Sayedee.

Bali further alleged that his captors offered him “crores of taka and a house” in exchange for the false statement.

When he refused, they allegedly continued the torture until he fell unconscious. He was treated in hospitals at times but after recovery, he was always taken back to confinement and tortured, he added.

Bali alleged that after months of abuse, he was handed over to members of India's Border Security Force (BSF) illegally. BSF also tortured him severely and took him to a sub-jail in Basirhat where he was kept for 22 days, according to the complaint. It added that Bali was shifted to Dumdum Central Jail where he was kept in captivity for about five years.

Bali has described his alleged ordeal as a “crime against humanity” and demanded accountability and punishment for all those he accused.

survived by drinking bathroom water and eating rotten bread. The mafia would even pull out people's nails and send videos to our families to demand money.”

But Nazrul was not freed; he was sold to another group that kept him in confinement for five months.

To ensure his release, his father-in-law sold 24 kathas of land to gather Tk 8 lakh.

“But the syndicate never freed me – they handed me over to the local police instead.”

He remained in jail until his repatriation along with 174 Bangladeshis.

Like him, most of the returnees shared similar stories of starvation, torture and extortion inside the mafia-run camps or Libyan prisons.

Victims said hundreds more Bangladeshis remain trapped in camps, known among migrants as “Game Ghor”, where traffickers keep people chained and torture them to extract ransom.

Among those who arrived yesterday was also a key syndicate member: the 42-year-old Sakhawat Hossain.

Based on information, the International Organisation for Migration and the Libyan police conducted a raid and rescued 40 Bangladeshis. Sakhawat was among them.

“He was actually involved in torturing and extorting migrants. He had no plan to return home but acted as a victim when detained by Libyan police,” said Mostafizur Rahman, additional superintendent of the Criminal Investigation Department's Human Trafficking Cell.

He boarded the chartered flight disguised as a victim. The CID and the National Security Intelligence identified and arrested him after interrogating returnees.

This was the third such arrest in the last five months.

Last time, Sakhawat was in Libya for five years and was involved in extorting money from migrants. He is wanted in two separate cases.

Sakhawat confessed to sending 400 to 500 Bangladeshis on four boats – 125 to 150 people in each boat – to Italy after extorting huge sums from them.

“We are now trying to trace where these Bangladeshis are. We have also learned that several thousand are still trapped in Libya, waiting for what they call the ‘game’, the dangerous boat journey to Italy,” Mostafizur said.

In 2024, 8,667 Bangladeshis entered Europe illegally, with 7,574 crossing the central Mediterranean, the same deadly route Nazrul had hoped to take, according to the EU's border agency Frontex.

More than 4,000 Bangladeshis reached Italy that year, while at least 700 died in boat accidents and other incidents.

Bangladeshis are now the largest group crossing the Mediterranean to
