

More than a decorative dot

The teep is often folded into the larger South Asian history of forehead markings, but in Bengal, it developed a distinct cultural life. That is why the accessory cannot be understood only as a religious symbol. It has long operated as an aesthetic and cultural one as well.

